Campaign Biography of Abraham Lincoln.

We shall issue in a few days a campaign biography of the Republican standard-bearer, in style so compact and cheap that, with suitable effort on the part of clubs, canvassers and local committees, it may reach every voter in the Northwest before the campaign is over. It will be a pamphlet of 32 pages, of close type, double columns, and in the style and shape of the campaign life of Col. Fremont, issued in 1856. It has been prepared with great care, by one of the editors of this paper, and it may be considered an entirely reliable and authentic narrative of the life of ABRAHAM LINCOLN,—embracing also the substance of his debates with Mr. Douglas in 1858, and a complete history of that remarkable campaign. It has been the purpose of the writer to make it the document of the times. A copy should be placed in the hands of every man in the Northwest who can read the English language. For the purpose of giving it the widest circulation we will furnish it at the following reduced rates:

Single copies	4 cents.
Per dozen	40 cents.
Per hundred	$2 50
Per thousand	$20 00

When ordered by mail, one cent each must be added for postage. Send in your orders. First come, first served.

OREGON.

An old citizen of Oregon, and a delegate from that State to the Chicago Convention, informs us that in his opinion Mr. LOGAN, the Republican candidate for Congress there, is elected. His belief is based upon a thorough knowledge of the counties which have not yet been heard from, and of the kind of work which has been done there since the last election. He adds that if the Legislature has been carried, as reported, by the Republicans and Anti-Lecompton Democrats, Col. E. D. BAKER, formerly of this State, and more recently of California, will probably be one of the new Senators. The split in the Baltimore Convention, he says, will inevitably give the electoral vote of Oregon to Lincoln and Hamlin.

The Campaign in Pike County.

On the occasion of the Pike County Republican Convention held at Pittsfield a few days ago, there was an impromptu demonstration of the most imposing character. Large delegations came in from all the townships and precincts with banners flying, drums beating and people shouting. One large wagon came in bringing a rail-cut from the woods, with axes, mauls and wedges. Arrived in town a long procession was formed with this wagon in the centre. As it passed through the streets the boys mounted the log and commenced splitting rails, amid the vociferous shouts of the spectators, and when the rails were all made and piled up, three tremendous cheers were given for Honest Old Abe.

The whole affair was unexpected to the citizens of Pittsfield, there having been no announcement for a public meeting nor any other occasion for bringing the people out, except a convention to nominate county officers.

A Good Beginning.

The Republican Club of Marine, Madison county, Illinois, now numbers 181 members, of whom 70 voted for Douglas two years ago.

"A Good Republican Orator."

Editors Press and Tribune:

In the first column of your paper to-day (Friday) you have an article under the above caption, referring to my address to the party assembled on the 4th inst. in Cold Spring Grove. That article contained the following remarkable paragraph:

"Dr. Davis has heretofore been classed as a "Squatter" Democrat; but his conscience and his judgement left him far above such political quagmires and unpatriotic principles. We welcome him to the ranks of the hosts of freedom, believing that he will never regret the step he has taken, nor the occasion he chose for giving in his allegiance to the great cause. The great Republican party extend a cordial welcome to all such accessions to their ranks."

This is a deliberate declaration that I have formally joined the "great Republican party," and that I seized upon a Fourth of July party, gotten up under the superintendence of ladies attached to one of our most respectable Churches, for "giving in my allegiance" to said political party. The first is inexcusably false; the second positively libelous. That my sense of propriety, if not my "judgment," should "lift" me high enough to address a promiscuous assembly on our National Anniversary, strictly on topics suggested by the occasion, without dragging in the partisan politics of the day, is doubtless true. And I pity the man whose soul is so contracted that even on the 4th of July he can attach no other idea to the word Liberty than that of interference with domestic relations entirely beyond his jurisdiction. Please give this as prominent a place in your next issue as was occupied by the paragraph already quoted. N. S. DAVIS.

CHICAGO, July 6th, 1860.

REMARKS ON THE ABOVE.

It would seem from the above communication, that we were mistaken in the conclusions we drew from the Doctor's speech, and that he is not yet ready to make his political actions harmonize with his proclaimed political sentiments. We regret this for his own sake. We love to see a man's vote consistent with his speech. The trammels of party organization often bind men long after their judgment has decreed a divorce.

Dr. Davis does not allege that the report of his Cold Spring remarks misrepresented what he said on the occasion. And we submit that the inference drawn therefrom, was fair and irresistable. The writer supposed that the sentiments he uttered were his genuine opinions, and to be consistent therewith, he must necessarily act with the organization which held the same doctrines. It did not occur to the writer that those glorious truths were intended to be understood in a Pickwickian sense, and he confesses that he cannot see how his inferences can be considered either "false" or "libelous." Whatever Dr. Davis's political declarations may be on the 6th of July, or all the rest of the year, it is certain they were Republican on the Fourth of July, according to all logical or legal rules of construction.

The next time the eloquent doctor calls for cheers for "Universal liberty," and declares himself unreservedly in favor of the Freedom of all the human race, and denounces tyrants and oppressors, we hope he will define the meaning he attaches to those words, and explain to his hearers that he desires to be understood in a Douglas or doughface sense, and not as Jefferson understood and applied such language; that by all mankind, he only embraces the white people of this country and Europe, and that when he calls for three cheers for "Universal Liberty" he "don't care whether slavery is voted up or down," and if two men want to enslave a third man, let them do it. By so doing, he will guard the Republican part of his auditors at least from misapprehending his meaning, or of libeling him by supposing that his real politics were consistent with his Fourth of July declamations.

THE OHIO DEMOCRACY.

Split of the Douglas and Breckinridge Factions.

The Baltimore Row Done Over Again.

We make the following extracts from a report of the proceedings of the Ohio State Democratic Convention, published in the Cincinnati Commercial:

When the Convention re-assembled, after dinner, the President called for Committee reports.

Hon. L. W. Hall, ex-member of Congress from Crawford, opened the Breckinridge programme by asking permission to offer a resolution to go to the Committee on Resolutions without debate, according to rules, but insinuatingly asked that it might be read for the information of delegates. Objections were raised, but delegates were afraid of bombshells, and after some chaffering, permission was granted, and the Secretary read the following:

Resolved, That inasmuch as the National Democratic Convention recently held at Baltimore, divided, and made two nominations for President and Vice President, we declare it as the opinion of this Convention, that every Democrat in Ohio is at perfect liberty to vote for either John C. Breckinridge for President, and Gen. Joseph Lane for Vice President, or Stephen A. Douglas for President and Herschel V. Johnson for Vice President, as either best accord with his views on the fundamental principles of the Democratic party.

There was furious confusion for a few minutes, when Hall mounted a chair, and moved the Committee be instructed to report his resolution back to the Convention. [Furious yells of "No," and "Down," "Down."] A dozen men on the floor shouting and gesticulating madly, and there was universal hissing.

Judge Rankin of Franklin moved to table Hall's motion.

Questions of order and privilege poured in from all directions.

Hall denied the order of Rankin's motion. He had not yielded the floor and intended to keep it.

More yells and points of order. Chair ruled Hall down—said he had abused the courtesy of the Convention. Hall insisted on his rights. Yells of "down with him," "down," &c. Hall would make a personal explanation. Shouts of "Don't want it," "you're no Democrat." Hall said if he were denied the privilege asked he had no business in the Convention. Confused yells of "That's a fact," "Let him explain," "Down with him," "Order." Delegates remonstrated against the application of the gag rule to anybody, and upon appeal of Rankin, the obstreperous Hall proceeded. He said he had acted in Democratic Conventions for sixteen years. His Democracy was known. The party had always been for measures, not men. Some fifty Democrats in that Convention disagreed with the majority, and wanted their sentiments respected. They preferred Breckinridge to Douglas. [Hisses and yells.] He wished to know if those who prefer Breckinridge are not regarded within the pale of the Democratic party. Deafening shouts of "No," emphasized and long drawn out. Hall attempted to go on, but was prohibited by clamor, when the chair peremptorily ordered him down. Judge Tanneyhill, in a tempest of passion, denouncing the Breckinridge men as disorganizers, who came to disturb the Convention. He made a rabble-rousing speech for Douglas, and got up a stunning excitement.

Hall again rose and demanded a hearing. More harmonious yells. Dozens tried to speak, and all over the house they said, "Let them go." The chair was getting frantic with his gavel, and there was music by the Democratic band. Hall was finally stifled and seceded quietly.

ANOTHER ROW.

Gov. H. B. Payne presented the report of the Platform Committee, and after it was read, a delegate moved the previous question, but withdrew it upon appeal of W. B. Telfair, of Clinton, who desired to speak.

Mr. Telfair had no disposition to throw fuel on the fire. He would love to see harmony, but it is useless to disguise the fact that there are divisions which threaten to destroy the Democratic party. Therefore, he didn't wish to see the names of Breckinridge and Lane on the wall. But he had been surprised to see in the hall flags inscribed with the name of Stephen A. Douglas. Why is this so? [Confusion and yells.]

Mr. Vallandigham said reproachfully, that the previous question had been properly moved, and had been withdrawn only by courtesy. He regretted it had not been pressed. He would be glad to hear the remarks of the gentleman, so long as they are confined within the bounds of propriety; but when gentlemen—

Mr. Telfair—"I'd like to know by what authority the gentleman assumes to say that my sentiments are not in accordance with the sentiments of this Convention?"

Mr. V. said he didn't.

Mr. Telfair ludicrously turned to the Convention, and saying he was for Douglas and Johnson with Squatter Sovereignty omitted, sat down under great laughter.

Mr. Muse of Muskingum moved the adoption of the resolutions by call of counties, to show that the Convention is strong for Douglas.

Judge Jewett denied Muse's authority to speak for Muskingum county.

The Chair decided the demand for such a call must be made by a whole county. Hamilton county made the demand; and the roll being called the resolutions received all but two votes, which were from Harrison county, and they subsequently knocked under. Telfair of Clinton voted yes, with the understanding that he repudiated Squatter Sovereignty.

THE BRECKINRIDGE MEETING.

The Breckinridge and Lane meeting at Nos. 63 and 64 Neil House, was formidable. U. S. Marshal Sifford says 117 delegates, representing every Congressional District in the State, were present. Hon. J. W. Byers, of Wayne, formerly Senator from that District, presided, and Wm. A. Neil, of Columbus, was Secretary. Hon. George Fries, Treasurer of Hamilton County, whose ability and respectability are well known all over the State, was elected Chairman of the State Central Committee—Dr. John Dawson is the Committeeman from this District. The brains of the Democratic party are in the movement, and the leaders mean business. They claim 40,000 votes in Ohio. It is an egregious mistake to presume that federal officers only are interested in the rebellion. It has many adherents among the Democrats who are disgusted with the one man power, and with the tyranny of the Douglas worshippers.

The proceedings were not merely harmonious, but were stunningly enthusiastic. One delegate, Charles Palmer, of Fayette, said his delegation had turned him out because he had the audacity to declare that there "might be contingencies under which he might vote for Breckinridge." U. S. Marshal Johnson said subsequently with evident sincerity, to a crowd of expostulating Douglas men, that "Douglas could not get an electoral vote in the Union, and that the only hope of electing a Democratic President, was to force the election into the House." Others were equally candid. There was a deal of angry chaffering between partizans of the two factions on the streets, but the Breckinridge men remained firm and sullen. Some of them declare the purpose of the movement to be radical—that is, to nominate electors, State and county officers, and candidates for Congress, and keep up the fire along the whole line.

A State Central Committee was appointed. Judge Belden, Judge Burchart, of Ashtabula, Col. W. D. Morgan, of Newark, Hon. R. Hutcheson, of Madison, Hon. L. W. Hall, of Crawford, and Wm. A. Neil, of Columbus, among others, were appointed a committee to prepare an address to the Ohio Democracy. Twenty-five counties were represented. A State Convention was called, to meet in Columbus on the second Tuesday in August, to nominate a State and electoral ticket.

At night there was a grand display of fire works in the State House Square, multitudes of people thronged the area, and the street in front, and the Democrats had no show for their class meeting. They finally got one up at the American corner, where some of them declaimed to a crowd of two or three hundred. Stambaugh, Douglas candidate for Attorney General, said, among other able things, that he "was prepared to discuss throughout the State with his Republican opponent, every legal question that might arise in this campaign." [Prodigious applause.]

THE WICKLIFFE RESOLUTION.

The following Baltimore slave-code resolution was reaffirmed by the Douglas Convention:

"Resolved, That it is in accordance with the true interpretation of the Cincinnati Platform, that during the existence of Territorial government, the measure of restriction, whatever it may be, imposed by the Federal Constitution on the powers of the Territorial Legislature over the subject of domestic relations, as the same has been or shall hereafter be finally determined by the Supreme Court of the United States, should be respected by all good citizens, and enforced with promptness and fidelity by every branch of the Federal Government."

Still another important fact, of the same purport, is the action of the Committee on Resolutions, in voting down the following resolution:

Resolved, That the right and power of self-government is inherent in every community organized for political purposes, let it be called a State, Territory, or by any other name, and that this power in this country is limited only by the provisions of the American Constitution.

Oregon Election.

The St. Louis papers of yesterday give the following additional information respecting the recent election in Oregon:

The counties yet to be heard from are Wasco, Polk, Curry, Coose, Columbia, Clatsop and Tillamook, which last year cast 731 Democratic votes and 300 Republican votes.

Material changes have taken place this year in counties heard from—some showing Republican gains on last year, and others material Republican losses—consequently both parties are hopeful of securing the member of Congress this year. The accounts all agree that such a Legislature, Republican and Anti Lecompton Democratic, has been elected as will insure the defeat of General Lane and Delazon Smith for re-election to the United States Senate.

Linn county, heretofore strongly Democratic, and the residence of Delazon Smith, has elected four members to the Legislature hostile to Lane and Smith. Douglas county gave the Democratic Congressional candidate 125 majority, but elected two Republican Representatives to the Legislature. There is no other news from Oregon.

IMPORTANT OVERLAND NEWS.

Capture of a Band of Desperate Outlaws.

Excitement over the Gold Discoveries.

THE CAMANCHES ATTACK A MAIL STATION AND KILL THE KEEPER.

[From the St. Louis Democrat, 4th.]

Mr. W. A. Wallace, one of the editors of the Alta Californian, arrived in our city last evening from San Francisco, having come by the Butterfield Overland Mail route. In consequence of sickness he was obliged to quit the stages at Fort Smith, and is consequently four days behind the mail. To him we are indebted for the following highly important and interesting war news, which has not before been communicated to the press:

The agents of the O. M. Co. have succeeded in breaking up a formidable band of robbers and thieves on the Colorado and Gila rivers. This section has been a place of refuge for fugitive villains for a long time, and their numbers have heretofore given them impunity from arrest. Many robberies have been perpetrated upon individuals, and also upon the company. On a recent occasion 100 sacks of barley, worth at that point 12c per pound, were carried off; animals also were stolen. The intentions of the band, however, were growing too sanguine for all of them. A plan was laid to rob the mail and passengers, and also the agent of the road. Before it was accomplished one of the band revealed the plot to Mr. Stevens, agent at the Colorado, and he, with Messrs. Jacobs and Iseger, took immediate steps to break up the gang.

On the 13th ult. three men were arrested and choked by a hangman's noose from the lower branch of a mesquit until they confessed crimes, names and numbers, with necks black from the compression of the rope. They were ironed, and sent under escort to San Diego for trial. They were men for whom rewards were still advertised, as escaped fugitives from the courts of that county.

The next day two others, having a lurking place down the river, were arrested, and after confession were ordered to leave the country at an hour's notice, which they were only too glad to do.

The revelations located members of the band all along the road as far as Tucson, where the leader, a bold, bad man, escaped from justice. In Los Angeles, remained. Messrs. Stearns and Jacobs came up to Tucson, arrested Jenkins and Phelps, and took them back to the Colorado. At the Pimo villages Jenkins managed to escape into the thicket that borders the river, but the Indians, 300 in number, turned out with sticks, surrounded the thicket, and drawing a circle, soon caught him, and he was sent on for trial.

Two other bad men were arrested at the Ferry—Reub. Leroy and Charley Rathburn—making ten in all, eight of whom were sent to San Diego for trial. There was great excitement among all the bad characters there, but the promptness of Stearns and Jacobs so astonished them that they made no attempt to rescue their associates.

The recent discovery of gold in the mountains, between the Gila and Mimbus rivers, is creating immense excitement through all the country. Hundreds of men and many women were passed on the road in all sorts of conveyances. Some of the towns on the Rio Grande were nearly depopulated. It was said that when the last stage came through, not more than forty men were remaining in El Paso. The employees of the Overland Mail Company at many of the stations have given notice of their intention to quit the service and follow the crowd. The country is undoubtedly rich in gold. We conversed with gentlemen who had visited the mines and who intend returning. Extraordinary good luck has attended the labors of many. The location of the mines is between the foot of the Gila and Mimbus rivers, about six miles from either stream, and about thirty miles north of the stage road. The Mimbus is a small affluent of the Gila, a hundred and fifty miles west of the town of Mesilla, and one hundred and forty miles from El Paso.

On the 18th ult., a band of 25 Camanches attacked the station at the "Head of Concho," 100 miles east of the "Pecos crossing," killed the keeper, Mr. J. W. Sheppard, scalped him, and run off all the stock, eleven mules. The stage was delayed seven hours for other animals to be brought in. Mr. Sheppard killed one Indian, the chief of the party, before he fell. He was a native of New Hampshire, but was recently from Kansas, where he has a wife and three children now residing near Lecompton.

At the Clear Fork of the Brazos river, about the 20th ult., Capt. Baylor, a Texas ranger, very fond of Indian sports, returned from a Camanche hunt, bringing nine scalps and forty horses. He asserted that he killed fifteen of the enemy, but was only able to secure nine scalps. His party consisted of six men.

On Tuesday morning, 3d instant, at day light, the Overland Mail station, twenty two miles east of Syracuse, was burnt. Four horses, one of the finest teams on the road, perished in the flames. The cause of the fire was unknown, but supposed to have arisen from a match having been dropped upon the ground, and ignited by being trodden upon by the horses. W.

Hon. Jo. Lane's Acceptance.

MR. CUSHING'S LETTER.

BALTIMORE, June 23d, 1860.

HON. JOS. LANE: I am directed by a vote of the National Democratic Convention, to inform you that you have been this day nominated by it as the candidate of the Democratic party for the office of Vice President of the United States, and on their behalf to request you to accept the nomination. I beg leave, at the same time, to enclose you a copy of the resolutions adopted at the Convention as the political platform on which the party stands.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,
(Signed), C. CUSHING, Pres't.

MR. LANE'S REPLY.

WASHINGTON, June 30, 1860.

HON. CALEB CUSHING, PRESIDENT: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the communication you make on behalf of the Democratic National Convention, in which you inform me that on the 23d inst., I was unanimously nominated by that body for the office of Vice President of the United States, with the request that I should accept the nomination. The platform adopted, and of which you enclose me a copy, meets with my hearty approval, as it embodies what I have been contending for as the only means of stopping sectional agitation, by securing to all equality and constitutional rights, the denial of which has led to the present unhappy condition of public affairs. Compromises of constitutional principles are ever dangerous, and I am rejoiced that the true Democracy has seen fit to plant a firm foot on the rock of truth, and to give the people an opportunity to vindicate their love of justice and fraternal regard for each other's rights. Non intervention on the subject of slavery, I may emphatically say is the cardinal maxim of the Democracy; non-intervention by Congress, and non-intervention by Territorial Legislatures, as is fully stated in the first resolution of the adopted platform. In vain should we declare the former without insisting upon the latter; because, to permit Territorial Legislatures to prohibit or establish slavery, or by legislation to invalidate property, would be granting powers to the creature or agent which it is admitted do not appertain to the principal or power that creates. Besides which, it would be fostering an element of agitation in the Territories that must necessarily extend to Congress and the people of all the States the right of every citizen to enter the common territory with whatever property he legally possesses. It necessarily devolves upon the Federal Government the duty to protect this right of the citizen whenever and wherever the same may be assailed or infringed upon. The Democratic party honestly meets this agitating question which is threatening to sever and destroy this brotherhood of States. It does not propose to legislate for the extension of slavery nor for its restriction, but to give to each State and to every citizen all that our forefathers proposed to give, viz: perfect equality of rights, and then to commit to the people, to climate and soil, the determination as to the kind of institutions best fitted to their requirements in their constitutional limits, and declaring as a fundamental maxim that the people of a Territory can only establish or prohibit slavery when they come to form a Constitution preparatory to their admission as a State into the Union. If, happily, our principles shall prevail, an era of peace and harmony will be restored to our distracted country, and no more shall we be troubled with the agitation of this dangerous question, because it will be removed as well from the Territorial Legislatures as from the halls of Congress—when we shall be free to turn our attention to more useful issues. The motive of our growth in national greatness, our Union must be preserved, but this can only be done by maintaining the Constitution inviolate in all its provisions and guarantees. The judicial authority as provided by the Constitution must be maintained and its decisions implicitly obeyed, as well in regard to the rights of property in the Territories as in all our other matters. Hoping for success, and trusting in the worth and justice of the principles of our party and in that Divine Providence that has watched over us and made us one of the great nations of the earth, and that we may continue to merit Divine protection, I cheerfully accept the nomination, so unanimously conferred on me, and cordially endorse the platform adopted by the Convention.

I have the honor to be, Sir, with much respect, your friend and ob'dt servant, JOSEPH LANE.

Dr. Stebbins of Portland, Me., to become their Pastor, at a salary of $3,500.

The Saturday Evening Review for to-day is to contain the Wigwam Sermon of Rev. W. W. Everts, a sketch of the preacher and his church, and other original and interesting reading suitable for the family circle. We are happy to observe a constant improvement in the tone of this paper since it changed hands, and trust it may be properly encouraged to keep on and pursue in well doing.

DISPENSARY FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN.—Drs. Jones and Buckal have established a Dispensary for the gratuitous medical assistance of women and children, at 155 West Madison St. Office hours from 2 to 3 o'clock P. M. every day. Over one hundred patients have already been relieved at this dispensary. Both advice and medicine are gratuitous. From a personal acquaintance we can confidently commend these physicians to those who may need their assistance.

CHAMPION RACE AT THE METROPOLITAN GYMNASIUM.—This Saturday evening, there will be a reception of the friends of the Metropolitan Gymnasium at 8½ o'clock, on which occasion, the second race for the champion belt will take place between J. Van Inwagen, the present holder, and Wm. J. Hyde. It is expected that very fast time will be made. Gentlemen accompanied by ladies or members will only be admitted.

THE SMALL POX.—Considerable uneasiness prevails in the community about the prevalence of the small pox, which undoubtedly exists in more than usually numerous cases. The city authorities should give it prompt attention, but then further and better than that, every family should be at once put under the full protection vaccination gives. It should be delayed for no consideration whatever. And in all cases this simple operation is too important to entrust to other hands than those of some experienced physician both for the guarantee he to the quality of matter and mode of its use. Much evil has been done by vaccine virus tainted with humors and impurities that have in some cases wrought an evil nearly as bad as that intended to be guarded against.

MCCORMICK'S NEW BUILDING.—The noble business structure that is to replace the Revere House on the corner of Randolph and Dearborn street, is to be of the blue tinted Joliet stone. The building will be six stories high, including the basement. The first story will contain a banking room and five stores; the second and third stories will be finished for offices in suits, well lighted and ventilated. A commodious and easy stairway from each street leads to the offices, communicating by wide passages in second and third stories, so that all the offices are accessible from either entrance. The fourth and fifth stories will be finished throughout, and will be reached by an entrance from Dearborn street, with a stairway independent of those leading to the offices. The entire basement will be finished for stores or offices. The sidewalks will be of large flagging, with coal vaults under them. The style and finish of the entire building will be of the first-class, and will equal in appearance any building in the city.

WHAT OUR ARCHITECTS ARE DOING OUTSIDE OF CHICAGO.—Probably no cities in the West, and but few Eastern towns, have as many really beautiful edifices, in proportion to their population, as Chicago; consequently we find the reputation of its leading architects is fast extending over the great Northwest.

A few days since we were shown by Mr. Wheelock, among other designs, one for a new academic institution at Merom, Indiana. It is now in course of erection by the denomination of Disciples or Christians, and is called the "Union Christian College." It is to be built of brick, in a substantial manner, in the Norman style of architecture, and will be four stories high, beside attic. Its turreted roof and cupola will render it an attractive object for miles around.

At Terre Haute, Indiana, a fine four-story brick block, designed for stores, is to be erected this season. It will be a commendable addition to that steady thriving town.

At Faribault, Minnesota, a beautiful cottage residence of stone is soon to be erected for Bishop Whipple, formerly Rector of the Church of the Holy Communion in this city.

At St. Paul, Minnesota, a fine two-story brick Italian villa, with cellar and attic is to be erected for J. C. Burbank, Esq., proprietor of the great Express line to the Red River of the North.

More of the Same Sort.

One of two things are certain, the scoundrels who fish for other people's money with bogus lottery prizes are spending much cash in unavailing postage, or they receive a meed of success from gulls caught by such bait which is proportionate to the exertions of these gentry of the first part. Certainly our Post Office is flooded with these "confidential" circulars. At the risk of giving the scamps a little gratuitous advertising, we are tempted to give the circular of a firm calling themselves D. E. Bishop & Co. of Wilmington, Del., who call themselves "Corresponding Agents for all Legal Lotteries," addressed to a respectable gentleman of this city:

DEAR SIR:—The great success that crowned our efforts in the last distribution of prizes has tempted us to offer to our patrons one of the most brilliant and attractive Lotteries ever drawn in this State, and one which can safely defy all competition. In this new scheme, of which we enclose our official schedule (that has been approved of by the State Commissioners) we make you a most liberal offer, by sending to our address $20 we will, of course, send you a fine arranged package of 25 shares of tickets ... that may entitle you to $100,000 and as a proof of our sincerity in our ability to aid you a good prize we pledge ourselves that should you fail to draw $50 or over, we will after the drawing send you another for the above name. ... These Lotteries are legalized by the State, drawn by State Commissioners, ... the State Treasurer to secure the prompt payment of prizes on demand.

You can remit the amount $20 in any solvent Bank or by draft, and whatever sum you may draw we will send by check on your nearest Bank. The strictest confidence is observed.

Hoping soon to hear from you, we remain, Respectfully and confidentially, D. E. BISHOP & CO.

Wilmington, Del., June 18, 1860.

Now, from this letter we should not judge that any ordinary description of butter would melt in the mouths of these gentlemen. They seem to take extreme pains to sell any and all descriptions of prizes out of the office, and would not probably for a large sum resort to the moral obliquity practised by the shocking sister-in-law of the late lamented Ali Baba, who all the world knows applied something sticky, perhaps a modification of Spaulding's Prepared Glue, to the bottom of her half bushel measure. Not such as she, are these pious Cheeryble Brothers of the Corresponding Agency at Wilmington, Delaware, who live in the hope of entitling somebody some of these days with a thumping prize of $100,000, and in the meantime are zealously dispatching "earnests of their sincerity" to all parts of the country by mail.

Any reader of sense will concede that if any sum that rightfully belonged to him from ten shillings to ten score thousand dollars was in the hands of any person or firm in Wilmington, Delaware, of whom he knew nothing but the name, and the payment was wholly without security, and indeed optional with the holders, he would for a rush sell out his chances of getting the same. Common sense and common law has come to surround common honesty, with such little aids to memory and honest dealing, as notes, and collaterals, backed by the whole commonwealth. The impudent lottery vender asks the public to believe that he only burns and thirsts to hunt up prizes for his patrons, which he will hasten with all zeal to pay over.

The fools are not all dead yet, and the balance left over furnish a fat field for the lottery venders. These lottery tickets are at the bottom of nearly every great embezzlement. The Clerk or Cashier who, in beginning to finger the funds of his employers means only temporary loans, finds his mistress expensive, and the fast horse voracious, and the devil's next suggestion is sure to be lotteries. Go on, whispers the tempter and some fine day with a plump prize you shall adjust all balances, fill up and turf over the grave of the past, and no one will be the wiser. Once embarked in this course the poor fool might as well be in the rapids at the head of Goat Island and think to shun the abyss of Niagara.

A New Charity in the Field.

Among other calls for "material aid" from our American people, comes one in behalf of no less a personage than His Holiness, Pope Pius IX, by his "next friend" in this country, John † Archbishop Hughes, who has given a late charity sermon just this direction, and calls on the faithful to out with their coppers, (in case metals of higher grade are not to be had.) He says:

"This aid cannot reach the Holy Father too soon. He has to sustain, as yet, the expenses of the Papal Government, whilst the resources, to a great extent, have been cut off. It has even been intimated that if things go on as they are now for any prolonged period, the Pope will not have the means to supply the wants of his own household."

Now, here's a pitiful case. In with your pennies Biddy; tip him your sixpence Michael. The call is urgent; there is a large, sweet little "household" of forty thousand Celtic and Austrian hireling soldiers whose "wants" must be supplied or inevitably the Italians will go to governing themselves and shave off the temporalities of Pio Nino. Peter and his pence forbid. Pass round the hat.

CHURCH IMPROVEMENTS.—The new Reformed Presbyterian Church has just been completed in a very tasteful manner, after plans by Mr. E. D. Howland, architect, and will be dedicated this next Sabbath. It is on Fulton street in the West Division, near Lake street bridge. We are glad to find that this Church is thus in the very heart of the city, which certainly needs churches as much as other districts.

It is of yellow brick, 70x56 feet, two stories high, in the Norman style of architecture, with old English square spire and weather vane, 109 feet from pinicle to the street. The basement, which is twelve feet high, is divided into chapel, study, infant class rooms and parlor, all opening into a spacious Sabbath school room, and together capable of accommodating a Sabbath school of 400. The audience chamber is the full size of the house, and is seated for 600. We observe quite an improvement in the arranging of half the central block of pews for small families, who do not need the large pews usually placed there, and do not wish to occupy inconvenient positions. The gallery which will seat 120, is tastefully carried up with open work arches, and the ceiling is supported by open work trussed beams. The ventilation is carried on by some thousands of small circular openings in the cornice, connected with the spire, which acts as a chimney for carrying off the heated air. The carpenter work has been executed by Alpin McDougall & Sons in their usual solid workmanlike manner.

The windows are of chocolate opaque glass, with a tasteful vine leaf border, manufactured here to order by our enterprising citizen, Elias Cooke. The walls are frescoed in sand stone, with vista of colonnade behind the pulpit, and the ceiling is light blue, panelled with wood work, painted in neutral colors, and the pulpit in white. The general appearance is airy and tasteful, and the arrangements commodious.

The zeal and enterprise with which this Society has labored to retrieve the disasters of fire and storm, deserve the highest commendation, and we have no doubt the sympathies of the church going community will be substantially exhibited in the collections at the Dedication. The building has cost $7,600, and we understand the Building Committee still need $600 to enable them to complete the arrangements for lighting and heating.

The Rev. John W. Morrison of Bloom, and some of the clergy of the city, with the pastor Rev. Robert Patterson, will conduct the dedication services at 10½ A. M., and 4 P. M. Collections will be taken up in aid of the building fund at both services.

A CHARMING TESTIMONIAL.—One of our city pastors—we do not feel at liberty to be more definite—has in his possession a freshly received testimonial from his former flock in a distant city, of a character and style so novel, so unique and yet so valuable that we are tempted to describe it.

It is in external appearance a large thin octavo volume richly bound in Turkey Morocco. On opening it, an autograph letter of farewell and affectionate remembrance is signed by the names of leading and prominent members of the Church and the Sabbath School. This itself is of much value as a tribute and memento. The rest of the volume brings these "Signers of the Declaration" of love and affection for their late pastor, face to face with him, in the form of between one and two hundred large sized, admirably executed photographs. Thus his late congregation and flock file among the annuals on his parlor table. Could a happier device have been hit upon? Certainly it could not have been more liberally carried out.

The Home for the Friendless are now well settled in their new building. It is suggested in various quarters that the friends of the Institution formally dedicate and inaugurate this noble charity by an occasion in the "house warming" line. A good idea. Why not?

The Tornado Relief Fund.

Editors Press and Tribune: CLINTON, Iowa, July 3, 1860.

I have just received from Wm. H. Brown Esq., Chairman of the Chicago Committee, another check for $477.50 "balance in hands collected for the relief of sufferers by late tornado."

I would try and express my opinion of the liberality of the people of Chicago, but I should have to do it so often, if I noticed every instance, that I must content myself with merely stating the fact that the above amount has been received. Truly yours, N. B. BAKER, Ch'n Donation Committee.

CHICAGO AS A SUMMER RESORT.—We intend to urge the admission of Chicago to the list of Summer resorts. Do our citizens fully appreciate the influences of our noble lake, and the fine beach they may enjoy by a ten minutes' ride North of the river? How many of our citizens have passed down the North side of the river and through the lumber yards, and thence out upon the broad promenade that surrounds the new light house? It is a spot well worth visiting, and may be visited without inconvenience by a walk of less than three rods. We are deficient, sadly deficient, in the use that should be made of our splendid water front, for bathing and swimming purposes, but that will come in time. As it is, with the weather of yesterday fresh in grateful remembrance, we do aver that "hundreds go further and fare worse" who pass the warm season away from Chicago, at least in the respect of keeping cool.

SIGNOR BLITZ AND HIS CANARIES.—The charming and wonderful feats of Signor Blitz' trained Canary birds, Baby and Jenny, with the martial prowess of Capt. Bob and Capt. Jack, have been nightly witnessed by large audiences, and every one has marvelled at the skill with which these little pets have been taught so much. The little folks will be glad to learn, and the elders in the little ones' behalf, that Signor Blitz is to give an entertainment at 3 o'clock this afternoon to the school children at a dime admission. CONGRATULATORY AND SUITABLE.—Mr. McVicker, we understand has received a congratulatory letter from all the artists who have been under his management for the last three years, expressing their delight at his having become sole manager of the theatre. They have tendered their services for a benefit on Monday. The public having equal cause to rejoice, will no doubt see that the benefit is a bumper.

The most intense mode of expressing contempt in Milwaukee, is to exclaim: "Go, I have no more to say! I scorn you as I do a glass of water!"—Chic. Tel.

If the drinking of water in Milwaukee were no better than it usually is in Chicago, it might well be held in contempt continually.—Racine Journal.

FALSE SECURITY.

The only danger now threatening the Republican party of the State and Nation is that of a false security, arising from the apparent certainty of Mr. Lincoln's election. The ragged and tattered condition of the Democracy every where—the division of their forces in all the States between Breckinridge and Douglas—the utter want of confidence in the ranks of either faction—the grim assurance staring the Douglas party in the face that, if they carry a few Northern States they only throw the election into the House of Representatives and thus secure the success of their mortal enemies—all these things contribute to a feeling of apathy on the part of Republicans every where, arising from the assurance that victory is already in their grasp. This will never do. The only thing to be taken for granted is, that Providence fights on the side of the strongest battalions. Political success comes only from the earnest and untiring zeal which no discouragements can daunt and no elements of confidence can lull to rest. It was the oft repeated assertion of Louis XIV, in his protracted wars, that "the last piece of gold would turn the scale"—a thought which he lived to see realized in the fact that his enemies had the last piece. It is no less strikingly true that in the contest before us, as in all contests which have preceded us, the last vote will win! It is not our business to inquire whether this man votes for Breckinridge, or that man for Douglas, or the third for Bell and Everett, but it is the proper vocation of Republicans to induce each of them vote for Lincoln, if the thing be possible. Let no one who has the good cause at heart, pause to weigh the consequences of an accession here or a defection there, but drive straight at the business of making votes in his own neighborhood. The consequences of the division in the ranks of our adversaries will be fully apparent in November, and then will be soon enough to learn them. Now is the time to put the success of Republicanism beyond contingencies of whatsoever description. "Work while it is yet day, for the night cometh in which no man can work!"

SHABBY TREATMENT.

We think no one can deny that the Douglas Democracy have been very shabbily treated by the slave power within the past two years. We will not recapitulate the events, familiar to all, which preceded the late Baltimore Convention and the nomination of Breckinridge. This last is the culmination of meanness, and to it we shall confine our observations on this general topic.

In the first place it was apparent to everybody that the party in the North was in the article of death, and could only be saved by the nomination of a particular man. Whether even that would have saved it may well be doubted, but it was plain as a pike-staff that no one but Mr. Douglas could have made a decent show of success in any of the free States except California. The Northern delegates at Charleston and Baltimore presented this contingency in little less than an agony of earnestness. No one was permitted to doubt their veracity, fortified as it was by all the facts of political history during the past three years. The South, in the pomp and pride of its 120 electoral votes, which were valueless unless 32 others could be found to add to their aggregate, declared flatly that they would not have Mr. Douglas in any possible or conceivable event. It was of no avail that he (Douglas) paraded the fact that his Squatter Sovereignty had "given to "slavery an area of territory five and a half "time larger than the State of New York." It was of no avail that he offered them a Sedition Law for "suppressing the irrepressible "conflict." It was of no avail that his friends recounted their long and tedious battles for "Southern rights," so-called. The unvarying reply was that the South would not have him. So far so good. The case amounted simply to a strife on nominations, of which Democratic Conventions have always been full. And now we come to the second phase of the ugly job, in which, after defeating Mr. Douglas, so far as a regular nomination was concerned, they hit upon the devilish ingenuity of so ordering the battle that all the States carried for Douglas should in reality play the game into their hands and not into his. Having an accessible majority of States in the House of Representatives, or in default of that, a certain majority in the Senate, they can well afford to let Mr. Douglas have a few Northern States, provided he can get them, for the purpose of carrying the election to a place where they can control it. The fifteen Southern States and California added, they can easily manage in such a way as to take them all for Breckinridge or give the contested ones to Bell. Douglas can have nothing there. But to make assurance doubly sure,—to take away his last lingering hope,—they must needs divide the Democratic forces in New York, already too weak to lose a single man, and put the thirty-five votes of that State far beyond the reach of the squatter sovereigns! This is the death blow of the party in the North. It was designed to be so, and it has accomplished the purpose for which it was struck. Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois are as yet open battle grounds for the Douglas men, if they choose to fight with the certainty that every vote they cast tends inevitably to give the Presidency to Breckinridge or old Jo. Lane!

This is what we call shabby treatment; very shabby indeed.

A WORD IN SEASON.

The farmers of the Northwest are rejoicing in the prospect of a bountiful harvest, and are fearing low prices. They have their reasons in the fruitful look of the well-tilled fields, and we have ours in the facts of our commerce. It has been the policy of the South to discourage protection of American industry, (1st,) because she has feared the too rapid development of the free North, and (2d,) because she has no industry of her own with which any part of the world can compete. She, through the so-called and falsely called Democratic party, has had, and still retains, the control of the national government, and the legislation which affects foreign commerce. The result is felt in every cabin and on every farm in the Northwest, as the figures will show. With few manufacturing establishments of our own, our importations of foreign fabrics are excessive, amounting in 1859 to $107,000,000 at New York alone. The theory is that they have been paid for in grain, pork, beef, &c. But the facts are that at the port, at which so many foreign goods were received, only $24,000,000 of breadstuffs and $15,500,000 of other farm products were sent. So that the whole of the surplus crop of the country is eaten up by silks, laces and cloths, leaving a debt of more than $50,000,000 to say nothing of the amount spent for brandy, wine, cigars, iron, hardware, &c. to be paid for in gold and bonds. The value of what produce is sent abroad is half eaten up by the cost of transit. Two bushels of wheat in Illinois equal only one bushel in London or Liverpool; hence, the farmer here really pays two prices for every article of foreign produce that he buys, not because the cost of that article, in dollars, is excessive; but because the price of his crop is so low. Now if we must [illegible] operatives (and this we must is evident,) [illegible] the distance between them and the producer be lessened, so that a bushel of wheat [illegible] the difference in the cost of labor being considered—may be as much in Illinois as in London or Liverpool; and let the operatives themselves be taken from our own people, and [illegible] the number of farmers and [illegible] the compensation of the labor of those [illegible] in the tillers of the soil. That is the [illegible] of National prosperity, and [illegible] the North gain it [illegible] [illegible] can succeed; and that the farmer of the North who hopes for good prices in succeeding years, and the manufacturers who want work and a market, must, if they are wise, aid in putting the Republicans into power. The South, niggers and cotton have had their turn; now let the North and free labor have a chance! Democracy and free trade have bankrupted the treasury and beggared the people. Let us go on the other track and see what will come of it. Matters cannot be made worse!

THE NEW MAP OF EUROPE.

The well known author of the "Pope and Congress"—E. About, has brought forth a new pamphlet with the ominous title of "L'Empereur Napoleon III. et la Prusse." That it reflects the ideas of Louis Napoleon seems to be very generally believed in Europe. The appearance of the pamphlet produced a profound sensation in Berlin and throughout Germany. It is craftily written, and its ulterior French purpose is masked; but it is generally understood nevertheless, to be as follows: A proposition to Prussia to assume and play the part of Sardinia; to annex or absorb all the smaller States of Germany on the east side of the Rhine, swelling her population from eighteen to thirty-three millions, and erecting herself into a first-class power. Austria is to remain outside of this new Prussia. France, in consideration of the agrandizement of Prussia, is to be permitted to extend her boundaries to the Rhine, by annexing the strip of territory lying between that river and her present eastern limits, including Belgium, nearly all the people of which speak the French language. Belgians speak French and are Catholics. Holland is Protestant, and mostly speak German. Hanover, Saxony, Mecklenburg, Holstein, Oldenburg, Wurtemberg, Baden, Nassau, Meiningen, Hohenzollern, Hesse-Cassel, Bremen, and twenty other smaller States and Dukedoms, are all German and chiefly Protestant, and would naturally assimulate with Protestant Prussia, and form one free and powerful nation. About urges upon the Prussian Government the necessity of liberalizing its constitution, and rejecting the doctrine of divine right, and adopting that of popular right.

Such, in brief, is the scheme shadowed forth in the new pamphlet. Prussia is inclined to bite at the bait. The mass of the people of Germany are delighted with the idea of a united Fatherland, provided a Democratic monarchy be instituted. The thirty little kinglets and dukes are in a state of terror, least the scheme may be carried out, and they be swallowed up forever. Bavaria and Austria appear to have been left out of the programme. It is surmised that Napoleon intends offering Bavaria to Austria, on condition that the latter gives up Venetia to the Sardinians. Venetia contains but three millions, while Bavaria has nearly five millions of people. And, moreover, the former is wholly Italian in language, feeling and geography; while the latter is Austrian in sympathy, position and religion. Hence, the exchange would be an excellent one for Austria. The German element of that empire is comparatively weak, but the annexation of Bavaria would make it potential.

It is also asserted that Napoleon will demand from Victor Emanuel the Island of Sardinia, which lies contiguous to Corsica, and convenient to France, in consideration for Sicily, Naples, and Venice, which he will allow Victor Emanuel to annex to his dominions, which would nearly complete the unity of the Italian race. Everybody believes that the fixed purpose of Napoleon is, to re-map Europe, and what he purposes he is very apt to execute. He has a pet theory of natural boundaries, and the unity of races. He believes that all the people who speak French belong to the French family—living North of the Alps and West of the Rhine should form one nation; that the Italian race should form another first class family among the nations; that the Teuton race should be collected into one powerful kingdom, or, at least, all that portion of country watered by rivers flowing North into the Baltic sea and German Ocean, and the dwellers on the Danube ought to form the Austrian Empire, which would make a nation of more than forty millions. What partition Napoleon proposes to make, of the estates of the "sick man" is a matter of surmise. It is alleged that he is negotiating with Russia on the subject. In the general re-mapping of Europe, Portugal would probably be absorbed by Spain, and Denmark by Sweden and Norway—making one government of the Scandinavian family. Whether Napoleon will live to see his grand schemes reduced to practice, is a thing no man can foretell; but should his life be spared a dozen years longer, it is a safe prediction that he will work some great changes, not only in the governments of the nations of Europe, but also in their boundaries. We publish some passages from the pamphlet entitled Napoleon and Prussia, with the comments of the London Times thereon, which will repay perusal.

OREGON.

We assume that the Republicans and Anti-Lecompton Democrats have carried Oregon, and that Joe. Lane and Delusion Smith, Senators in Congress from that State, will be unseated as soon as the Legislature meets. We take it for granted also that Lincoln is as sure to get the electoral vote of Oregon as that of Massachusetts. So the ball rolls, and so the principles of Jefferson and true Democracy are receiving their vindication at the hands of the people. Now for California!

THE NATIONAL FINANCES.

The posting of the books at Washington on the 30th of June—the close of the fiscal year—shows a balance of only $4,000,000 in the national treasury subject to draft, $10,000,000 less than ought to be there according to the estimates of the Secretary of the Treasury in December last—an error which remembering its "Democratic" source ought not to excite surprise.

It is now probable that the country is in debt not less than $65,000,000—one of the results of Democratic misrule. When the Democracy took upon themselves the work of reconciling the country to the Dred Scott decision, there was a balance of nearly, if not quite, $20,000,000 in the treasury. They have squandered this sum, spent all of the current receipts and run up the debt to the enormous amount that we have set down above. The purchase of enough "pure patriots" to insure the endorsement of that Dred Scott iniquity by the party has proved to be unexpectedly expensive. But between army, navy, coal, transportation and victualling contracts, the work has been accomplished; and Dred Scott is endorsed; but the tax-payers will be compelled to foot the bills.

THE KILKENNY CATS.

A Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia North American says that the leading friends of Mr. Breckinridge here are frank to say, while claiming a larger vote than Mr. Douglas, that one has no more chance of success than the other. They do not pretend that it is a serious contest for the Presidency on either side. They are making the fight in good earnest, and with as much efficiency and zeal as if success was probable, but only for the purpose of securing the organization in 1864. That is the true object of the struggle now. They intend to terminate all internal divisions hereafter, by leaving Mr. Douglas and his followers outside the so-called national party, and purifying it in other important respects.

Correction.

In an article recently published in regard to the Jones County (Iowa) banks, the decision was, by mistake, attributed to Judge Dillon. A correspondent corrects us, stating that it was made by Hon. William E. Miller. The decision is alike honorable to the Judge and to the State, whose interests he is appointed to guard.

A [illegible]

The Albany Atlas and Argus speaks for the week with the following declaration of faith:

"We believe the electoral vote of this State will be cast for Stephen A. Douglas. All the signs of the times indicate such a result."

Is not this a refreshing avowal? The faith of Thomas Aquinas, Credo quia impossibile est, was current skepticism to it. Such a believer is fit for the Papal crown or for a Cardinal's hat at the least.—N. Y. Evening Post.

WORTHY OF SPECIAL MENTION.—George M. Browne, Esq., President of the Eastern Railroad, reports that for the year ending May 31st that corporation transported one million three hundred thousand passengers over its road, without injury to any one.

OUR BOSTON LETTER.

The American Board—Half a Century of Existence—Report of the Missionaries—The World—Tornado in Boston—The Douglas Meeting—The Boston Post Office—Miss King's Readings—Dr. Hayes' Expedition—Gloucester.

[Correspondence of the Press and Tribune.]

BOSTON, July 2, 1860.

The organization, fifty years ago, of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions was celebrated on Friday, the 29th of June, at Bradford. The General Association of Congregational Ministers of Massachusetts was applied to in June, 1810, by four young men, Adoniram Judson, Samuel Mott, Samuel J. Mills and Samuel Newell, who desired to be set apart for the missionary work. Their request was complied with, and the American Board was organized for their support, and to carry on the work begun by them. From this beginning the Board has grown to be the great enterprise which it now is. The financial prospects of the Society are said to be better than ever before. The receipts for May were nearly $40,000, of which more than one-third came from Massachusetts. I think that this improvement for May, is due to the fact that a number of rich churches in Massachusetts make their annual contribution in May. Above $5,000 is to be deducted for legacies also, so that I very much question whether contributions can be relied on to get the Board through. A special effort is making to pay off the old debt, and hopes are confidently expressed that it will be successful. I have watched this matter for some years, both in its relation to rich societies and rich individuals, and I think the question is eminently pertinent, Is capital yet converted to the belief that the impenitent world is in danger of eternal hell? An Irish famine, a fallen factory, a devastating tornado draw a maelstrom of public sympathy into which are swept the benefactions of all classes of society. A world in imminent peril of hell hardly creates a tide of sympathy sufficient to carry the superfluous means of a small portion of society. There is wrong somewhere. Either the capital of these Christians, or their creed is not true. It devolves on them to show which is wrong. The world will not believe that they really believe that Christ died to save the world from hell and sin, unless by vital union with him in great sacrifice for this work they prove that they believe it. God speed the good work which good men undertake, and God slay all shams. Another fifty years must see one of two things: either the conversion of capital to the work of saving God's world from hell, or the fall of the creed which asserts the need of this salvation. It is a great sum which the Board has collected in its half century of infancy. But this great sum is but a grain of sand when we look to it for proof that Christ slain for the sins of the world is a reality attested by the sacrifice of the Christian world for the salvation of souls. What shall be the testimony of the next half century? Who will show us capital crucified with Christ for the sins of the world? Who will hurt himself in his means to help the perishing? Religion has got to be so popular that it is in danger of becoming a sham. It is dealt in as a thing which will pay. Give us some which costs something, or confess that the Master was for his age and not for ours.

In this connection, I am reminded of a new sham put out in the name of religion. I mean the new dail paper published in New York, with special reference to the recognition of Christianity, price one cent. I call it a humbug and a cheat. A copy fell into my hands the other day, and I never want to see another. The editorials read like the essays of Dryasdust. It is a rascal only who will pretend to sell for one cent what cannot be sold at that price. If this paper is to be given away, let its publishers say so, and not virtually lie about all papers that are sold for two cents. If this price is to defraud other papers for a time and so get a start, let all decent people give it a wide berth. And think of calling a paper which is based on opposition to worldliness, The World! Call its successor "The Flesh," and the one after that "The Devil." I daily exclaim, in the language of the Psalmist, Confounded be all they that work iniquity. The present tendency to serve God by means of the world, the flesh and the devil, especially moves me to thus ejaculate. I live in hourly expectation that some ungodly wretch will turn up peddling his no brains, no religion and total rascality under the title of "The Grace of God made Easy," "The Gospel, price four cents," or some equally blasphemous conceit of sanctimonious shrewdness. A New York daily usually has this advertisement on Saturday, "The Sons of God (i. e. those made free from sin and partakers of the divine nature) will meet to-morrow in So and So Hall at 10 o'clock." We need some Carlyle to prick the swellings of sanctimonious pretence and show the world the selfishness which has got the name of religion. An age of persecution would do us good.

Last Friday afternoon a tornado swept over Boston, doing considerable damage to chimneys, partially erected buildings and the trees on the Common. The Big Elm, which has stood on the Common ever since before the settlement of the country and witnessed all the changes and events of the history of Boston, is as good as gone. It was broken and about half split away by the violent wind, and the prospect is that the remaining part will die. Boston Common is very beautiful, a great source of health and comfort to the inhabitants, although it is [illegible] beautiful as it might be [illegible]. The Big Elm has been a centre of attraction on the Common, a meeting place from the days of the revolution, and it will be much missed.

Together with the tornado came a Douglas Ratification meeting in Faneuil Hall. It was in every respect a failure. The Democracy is worse off than the Big Elm. It is broken, and split and doomed. Wm. A. Richardson must come to Boston to blackguard Abraham Lincoln and rant lying prophecies. He will go home again to defeat, as ships go down in mid ocean, never to come up again! I like to tell these fellows, as they depart for their long journey, what I heard more than one say in Southern Illinois last spring: "We want Douglas nominated because we want to whip him." I think the public heart is fully set upon whipping Douglas, whatever else may be done. He has played just that game which honest men are wont to reward with a flogging.

Mr. Hawthorne, Mr. James T. Fields and Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe were among the passengers by the Europa last week. Mrs. Stowe's party went out last August. I think a part of them have not yet returned.

Mr. Postmaster Capen is making a great fuss just now. It is expected that he will remove the Post-office to Summer street again, to the great disgust of the heavy business men in State street and vicinity. Mr. Capen undoubtedly speculates in this and would seem to have selfish motives. The Summer street office is a wretchedly contrived little box, neither fit for the making up nor the convenient delivery of the mails. However, let them squabble until we get an honest administration.

The sister of Thomas Starr King, Miss Angela S. King, has been giving very successful popular readings in Charlestown, Watertown, Lynn, Salem and West Cambridge. Her efforts are much and justly applauded.

Dr. Hayes little craft is now ready for sea, a strong and serviceable craft too. He will sail immediately. The success of attempts to find a few lost men or to find a passable way for more easy trade, or quicker intelligence, seems to me to contrast queerly with the limited pecuniary success of the missionary movements of which I spoke in the beginning of this letter.

A report of the fisheries of Gloucester makes the product of this branch of industry for the year 1859 to have been nearly one million and a half of dollars. This ancient town certainly stands before all others in this business.

DOCTOR.

From Lower Egypt.

[Correspondence of the Press and Tribune.]

METROPOLIS CITY, Massac County, Ill., June 21, 1860.

Presuming you have no correspondent in this section of "Egypt," and realizing the importance of your having one here to inform your numerous readers of the magnitude and advantage of this section of the great State of Illinois, and to keep them posted in relation to the current events of the day, I have resolved myself into the aforesaid individual, and herewith transmit to you my first installment for the columns of the PRESS AND TRIBUNE.

This place, the county seat of Massac County, is situated on the Ohio River, forty miles above its confluence with the Mississippi, and is one of the most advantageous locations for a town on the lower Ohio. Half a mile above here is the site of Fort Massac, from which the county took its name, established in 1758 by the French, as a connecting link between their trading-posts, Forts Cohokia, Kaskaskia, Chartres on the Mississippi, Vincennes on the Wabash, and Du-Quesne on the upper Ohio, and named in honor of M. De Massac, a French nobleman. In 1809, Aaron Burr, in his operations, visited this Fort frequently, and a nephew of his—Burr Brown—was one of the first settlers of this town, and lived here until his death, which occurred two years ago.

This Fort was also the site selected for the establishment of a National Armory, by the Commissioners who were sent out by Congress in 1849, for that purpose, and an effort is being now made by the citizens of this and adjoining counties, to secure an appropriation by Congress for the above-named purpose.

This county is also the seat of the famous "Massac War" that broke out in 1846, between the "Flatheads" and "Regulators," and which called out the militia of the State to quell. It will thus be seen, that historically, this point is rich in incident, and I presume if the history of this section, for the last hundred years, was written, it would constitute one of the most interesting chapters in the history of our country. But leaving history and passing to geography, I can proudly and truthfully say that "Lower Egypt" as it is called, has not its superior, if it has its equal in all the Mississippi Valley, in point of natural advantages. In the items of soil, minerals, timber, water, climate, facilities of transportation, &c., this country cannot be equalled by any portion of the West. While others may excel in some one particular, there is no such combination to be found as here. That, however, of which this country is the proudest is the facility for raising fruit. This is emphatically the great peach country of the West, if not of the world. There are fortunes yet to be made in this one crop alone.

I suppose items in relation to the growing crops are always welcome. The wheat crop this year is light in this county. Owing to the extremely dry weather through the spring months, the growth is small but the berry is excellent, and yields remarkably well. Latterly we have had copious showers and plenty of sunshine, and the corn crop is coming on luxuriantly. But that which pleases the most is the bountiful supply of fruit, especially peaches. The trees are already literally breaking under their growing burden. If the attaches of the PRESS AND TRIBUNE office will visit Massac county this season they shall have all the peaches and cream they can dispose of.

In my next I may have something to say concerning the present all-absorbing subject—politics.

MASSAC.

The Congressional Fight.

CHICAGO, July 6, 1860.

Editors Press and Tribune:

It is known that the Whiteside County Convention on Tuesday last appointed two sets of delegates to the Congressional Convention at Dixon. As a fitting reply to the gross misrepresentations of your correspondent over the signature of "Whiteside," which appear in this morning's issue of your paper, and as a part of the history of that Convention, I, as a friend of Mr. Arnold's, ask you to publish the following correspondence. It speaks for itself, and shows, over the signatures of responsible and honorable men, what means were resorted to by the friends of Mr. F. to secure his success. I have strong faith that the proper tribunal will stamp such conduct with the condemnation it so richly deserves.

J. A. B.

MORRISON, July 4, 1860.

To L. H. ROBINSON, A. C. JACKSON, JOE WARE and others:

GENTLEMEN: Will you please advise us whether the primary meeting of your town was regularly called, and also

1. What number of voters voted for the ticket friendly to Mr. Arnold's nomination?
2. What number of votes were against it?
3. When, where, and by whom, was the contesting delegation from Morrison elected? Was any meeting for that purpose ever called?
4. Were you present in the County Convention yesterday, and state whether the friends of Mr. Arnold, including the delegation from Sterling, of which we were members, would not have constituted a clear majority? An early reply is desired.

E. N. KIRK,
Chairman Republican County Com.
FRED'K SACKETT.

July 4th, 1860.

To Messrs. KIRK and SACKETT:

GENTLEMEN: In reply to your note of this morning, we state,

That our town convention was regularly called by our Town Central Committee, and the notice published in our local newspaper. Its regularity was never questioned.

Our Convention was well attended, and numbered about two hundred voters, and was almost unanimous in their choice of Mr. Arnold. Not more than twelve men voted for Mr. Farnsworth.

The citizens of our town have no knowledge as to whom, or by whom, the contesting delegation from our town was elected. No public meeting for that purpose was ever called, and some of our citizens whose names were used as contesting delegates repudiated the whole affair, and declared in open County Convention, that their names were used without their consent, and that they would not be parties to the fraud.

We were present at the County Convention yesterday, and know that if the friends of Mr. Arnold from Sterling (composing, as we think, the regular delegation), had been allowed their seats in the Convention, he would have had a large majority.

The town of Sterling is entitled to a much larger number of delegates (24) in our County Convention than any other. And our town of Morrison ranks next to it (having 13 delegates.)

There was in fact NO CONTEST about our delegation, but a bogus delegation was made up by a few of Farnsworth's friends, for the purpose of keeping our delegation out of the Convention, until the Sterling delegation (about which there was in fact a contest) could be passed upon by the Convention, and Mr. Arnold's friends from Sterling excluded, and as soon as that was done all claim or pretense that there was any contest in our town was withdrawn by the same friends of Mr. Farnsworth, who had previously presented and insisted upon it. Yours,

Chairman of Town Committee.
JOE WARE,
A. C. JACKSON,
S. H. MCCREA,
WARD P. LEWIS,
Chairman Town Caucus.

An Up Country Letter.

[Correspondence of the Press and Tribune.]

WHITEWATER, Wis., June 23d, 1860.

There is very little excitement in the political circles in the Badger State, as yet. The people have not begun to move, and will not until after harvest.

The Republicans have held a few meetings to ratify the Chicago nominations, but no great excitement or enthusiasm has thus far been manifested. However, there is no doubt as to the position this State will occupy next November. She will be thoroughly Republican. Not one vote will be lost because Seward was not nominated. She stood up manfully for him, but she was not so fixed in her devotion to his interests as to falter for one moment in the support of Republican principles, because he was not the successful candidate; and Honest Old Abe will get full fifteen thousand majority, let the Democrats nominate whom they will.

The Democrats profess to predicate their hopes as to the result in this State next fall, upon the aspect the recent judicial election presents, and argue that because conservatism was maintained by the election of Chief Justice Dixon, that their party can succeed in the coming struggle. This kind of reasoning has no basis. The Republicans who voted for Dixon have no more notion of voting for Douglas or any other Democrat than the Angel Gabriel has of becoming a pimp of his Satanic majesty. Not a bit. They will all come forward to the support of the Republican nominees. The result will verify this assertion.

are all right at this date. Never did they promise a better yield, and everything in Nature seems to combine to inspire the belief that the present prospects will be fulfilled beyond [illegible]. Wheat is very heavy on the [illegible] all parts [illegible] growth, and [illegible] ground, very uniform [illegible] weather is in all respects well calculated to bring it forward in the best shape to ensure plump kernels of the whitest and best quality. It is laughable to hear farmers complaining that their grain is too heavy. They always complain, but this complaint is the most absurd of all.

Corn and other spring grains are coming on well, very well. One thing is observable throughout the State—more ground has been sown than ever before, every available acre has been put under the plow, and the whole country presents one vast sea of waving grain. With an ordinary season the yield would be at least ten per cent. more than ever before.

THE FARM MORTGAGE QUESTION.

The recent decision of this mighty question so far as the interests of the State are concerned, has at last been reached, and the suspense of the people is over.

The decision, it is useless to deny, took the people at large with surprise. It was not expected that the question would be thus decided. Perhaps the wish was the father of the expectations, as a general thing, but even those who had no direct interest in the event of the decision believed the mortgage would be held void.

The effect of the decision can hardly be correctly foretold at this time. Some think it will drive twenty-five hundred families out of the State: but this is too wild. If the holders of the mortgages manifest a disposition to compromise at fair rates, but a few will leave; but if they demand full pay at the earliest period in their power, thousands undoubtedly will have to forsake cultivated and happy homes and seek new ones in the far west, with aching hearts, perhaps, but certainly, wiser heads.

In view of the fact that our Legislature has for two years past afforded every opportunity to the mortgagors to interpose defences to the mortgages grounded in fraud and misrepresentation; that a concerted resistance may be made à la mode anti-rentism, to the foreclosure of the mortgages, and the possession of the lands under Sheriff's sale, and many other obstacles which might be brought forward by desperate men, it is believed that the holders of these mortgages will have a hard struggle if they attempt to be too fast in the collection of their claim; and that, therefore, they will be induced under all the circumstances to compromise or settle at reasonable rates.

THE MORTGAGES GIVEN TO THE MILWAUKEE RR. COMPANY.

It is claimed that the decision in question does not dispose of the questions as to the validity of these mortgages; that the reasoning of the judge who delivered the opinion of the Court, tends directly to sustain the idea that they are void, and there is good reason for this claim.

It must be understood that the charter of this company is more strict as to the manner in which it shall sell its stock, than the other railroad charters in this State, and expressly prohibits the company from dealing directly or indirectly in real estate. The judge lays down the maxim that where a railroad charter contains these provisions that a mortgage given to the Company would be void. A case involving the validity of these mortgages is pending before the Supreme Court, and will be soon decided, and then we shall know. Yours,

COUNTRYMAN.

The Mendota Collegiate Institute.

[Correspondence of the Press and Tribune.]

DIXON, July 2d, 1860.

The "MENDOTA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE" is located at Mendota, Ill., as its name indicates, and is under the supervision of Rev. James S. Henderson, who is assisted by an able and active corps of teachers, male and female.—This institution has just closed its 18th session under very flattering and encouraging circumstances.

It was my privilege to attend upon a portion of the closing exercises. The examinations under charge of Mr. L. P. Paddock in ancient and modern languages were well sustained and highly creditable both to teacher and pupils, demonstrating most fully, that the system here pursued in imparting instruction in languages is not open to the objections we often hear urged against other institutions. The "stuffing" process is not resorted to, or depended upon to make their pupils "appear well" before the "Examining Committee."

Miss M. B. Keeling's female classes in Natural Science, so far as heard, also exhibited thought and careful and useful training. The prominent idea seems to be to make the scholar think for herself.

On Thursday evening, June 28th, occurred the exhibition services held in the Presbyterian Church, which at an early hour notwithstanding the rain, was filled with an appreciating audience. In these exercises it is sufficient to say that without exception, the young ladies and gentlemen distinguished themselves. The essays by the young ladies, and orations by the young men were original in the strictest sense of the term, and all well composed, and well read or delivered. It might be regarded as invidious to designate persons—nor is this needful where all did so well. The singing, and music upon the piano under the conduct of the accomplished teacher of this department, Miss H. B. Stephens, was admirable.

To relieve the exercises somewhat the young men prepared a humorous burlesque upon the late Charleston Convention, which was conducted with infinite humor throughout, greatly to the delight of the audience. I verily believe if Mr. Yancey himself had been there, and had heard Mr. S. M. Inglis in the midst of his oratory, roaring "speak on the platform," he would have joined in the enthusiastic applause which followed. We had that memorable convention and Yancey reproduced to the life. But we close by pronouncing the Mendota Collegiate Institute a good school, and worthy the patronage of all the lovers of a sound, moral, religious education.

ONE OF THE BOARD OF EXAMINATION.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

NEW EDITION OF IRVING'S WORKS—History of New York from the beginning of the world to the end of the Dutch Dynasty, by Diedrich Knickerbocker—Author's revised Edition—complete in one volume. New York: G. P. Putnam. Chicago: S. C. Griggs & Co., Nos. 39 and 41 Lake street.

The name of Washington Irving is written indelibly upon the history and the literature of his country. It to the patriots and statesmen of the Revolution, Humanity is in all succeeding ages is indebted for a clearer and more convincing statement of the rights of man in the Declaration of Independence and for their successful development in the constitution and the free institutions of our country, to Washington Irving will mankind recur as one of those noble men whose genius has adorned, and in fact created American literature. Now that he has passed away, it is well that his works should be published in an uniform edition, so that all our people may obtain, in convenient form, the rich legacy he has bequeathed to his country.

We need not enter into an analysis of the volume before us. Those who have read this inimitable history will have a vivid recollection of its contents, and to those who have not, we can only say buy the book, for it is impossible for us, in a short paragraph, to give any idea of the keenness of its satire, its sparkling wit, and the rich vein of genuine humor which runs through all its pages. It has long since passed into the classic literature, not only of our own country, but into that of the English language. This is one of twenty-one volumes, to be issued monthly by G. P. Putnam, of New York. The paper is a beautiful rose tint, and the whole typographical execution is in Putnam's best style. The publisher promises, and the volume before us certainly foreshadows its fulfillment, that "this will be greatly superior to any other edition ever before issued." We trust our literary readers, and all who wish to make the best possible addition to their libraries, will at once call at Griggs's and subscribe for the work.

The Crops in Iowa.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA, July 5, 1860.

Editors Press and Tribune:

The promise for a harvest one-third in excess ever before realized, could not be more flattering. Wheat is fast maturing, without appearance of rust. Oats are very heavy, and filling out finely. Corn stands well, and now "high as a horse's back." Yours, J. WEARE.

Anniversary at Clark Seminary.

[Correspondence of the Press and Tribune.]

AURORA, Ill., July 4, 1860.

MESSRS. EDITORS: It was one of the best freaks of fortune I have experienced for many years, accidentally, to be at Aurora during the examination and Anniversary Exercises of Clark Seminary, under the superintendence of Rev. G. W. Quereau as principal—a gentleman of many years experience as an educator, whose superior cannot be found within my knowledge—assisted by Miss J. Washburn, a lady whose mild, genial and Christian influence may be seen and felt among all in her presence; loved by all with whom she is associated; with a corps of Professors who, for tact, ability, education, thoroughness in instruction, piety and example cannot be excelled in any institution in the West.

There is no institution of learning in the whole West, with which I am acquainted, that I would sooner commend parents and guardians to commit their children, and feel that they are in safe, able and parental hands, than Clark Seminary.

The opening, and very interesting features were the plain, practical, eloquent and impressive discourses addressed to the students upon the Sabbath by Rev. A. W. Paige, of Plainfield, and Rev. J. C. Stoughton, of Freeport.

Monday and Tuesday were spent in the examination of classes under the several professors, and Misses Washburn and Howard. A more thorough examination, with scarcely an imperfect answer, better demonstrations and translations I have never witnessed. Nothing fixed up for the occasion, questions, problems, &c., asked by carelessly opening to any page, the committee proposing questions at random, and with but two or three exceptions, failures, and those from bashfulness. More thorough examinations in the languages and sciences, and with such perfect success, I never have witnessed, than under Professor Hale; and in higher arithmetic, algebra, &c., under Prof. Kellog; Geometry, German and French, under Miss Howard, in any college in our land.

Prof. Hale, with his practical, eccentric and happy manner of imparting instruction cannot fail to win the love and enlist the heart of any student, unless he be a drone.

The music, under Prof. Simonds, particularly as performed by Miss Burhans, was charming. The paintings, drawings and wax work, under Mrs. Kellog, Quereau and Miss Potter, cannot be excelled.

I must not forget the Primary Department, under Prof. E. B. Baldwin, one of the most interesting exercises of the day, in which I was perfectly delighted; the problems solved, the singing, outlines in geography could not be excelled in any school, particularly the recitation of Miss Mary B. Birney, "The Boy and his Angel." In whatever Prof. Baldwin engages, his ambition, energy, and ardor, knows no failure.

At the close, the students were addressed by Rev. A. W. Paige of Plainfield, Rev. —— Bibbins of Oswego, and Rev. J. Buell of the Congregational Church, Aurora. In the evening the exhibition by the students was never excelled by any College or University within my knowledge.

HISTORY.—During the past year (the first) it is [illegible] has been 345 students. [illegible] Fall term, 177; winter term, [illegible]; spring term, 151. Average attendance, 189. Gentlemen, 188. Ladies, 169.

Aurora has furnished 117. Twelve different States have been represented, and 82 different towns.

In Latin and Greek, 62; French and German, 17; higher mathematics, 182; commercial course, 23, of which 17 have received their diplomas; higher English, 154; drawing and painting, 22; musical, 56.

One has been requested to leave, three dismissed, and none expelled. Seven have professed conversion.

A strong religious influence seems to exist in the atmosphere of the Seminary. There cannot be an Institution found in the West of the age of one year, like Clark Seminary, that is growing with a like rapidity.

Any Institution where you can find as Christian, gentlemanly, and as thoroughly educated Faculty, acting together in perfect harmony and efficiency, with a valuable library and apparatus, and that existing in as beautiful a place as Aurora, will not fail in any State to attract students.

Moreover, wherever you can find the Female Department of any Institution conducted by a lady like Miss Washburn, the Preceptress, and such special attention paid to this important department, assisted by such accomplished ladies as Mrs. Quereau and Kellog, and Misses Howard and Potter, it will not fail to rise.

We believe that Clark Seminary is bound to be one of the brightest stars in this our Western horizon.

It is now no mere experiment, but already holds a warm place in the hearts of the whole surrounding country. Long may it live to be the scene of many as pleasant, instructive, and interesting anniversaries.

Well may Aurora be proud of Clark Seminary.

The Lincolns of Old.

The farmers of Gloucester county, New Jersey, assembled in large numbers, in the village of Clarksboro', last week, to ratify the nomination of Abraham Lincoln and Hannibal Hamlin. They were addressed by S. J. Rea, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Bradshaw, of Woodbury. Much enthusiasm was manifested, and the meeting continued to a late hour.

One of the points made by Mr. Rea, in his address was received with much applause. He declared that the family name of Lincoln was historical. So old was it, that it had given its name to one of the most ancient and most fertile counties of England. It existed before the days of William the Conqueror, and remains as the title of one of the proudest of English families until the present day. It is the distinguishing title of the eldest son of the Duke of Newcastle—one of the most princely of the old nobility.

In Lincolnshire those bold, rude Saxon foresters who resisted the grasping, grinding tyrannies of the feudal lords, who for the long centuries protected the yeomen and the vassals against the encroachments of a selfish gentry, and often laid their lust and brutality under just contributions, wore the Lincoln green as their distinctive peculiar color. This class of men constituted, for many years, the only bulwark for the protection of the old traditional popular rights of the free Saxon. The ardent attachment borne for their memory is attested in the ballad literature of the middle ages, and has been embodied and immortalized in Locksley, the friend and protector of Rachel, the Jewess, and ally of the Black Knight and Ivanhoe, against the gross bestiality and ungoverned passions of Brice Bois De Gilbert. This color was worn by many of the gallant yeomanry who rallied about the standard of the English blacksmith, when he rose in the dignity of freedom to check the insolence and encroachments of kingly power.

But beyond all this the name of Lincoln is enshrined in the glory of our revolutionary struggle, alike upon the bleak hills of New England, and among the mountains of Pennsylvania, and upon the plains of the South. Charleston was bravely defended by a Lincoln—to a Lincoln the sword of Cornwallis was surrendered at Yorktown—and by a Lincoln the hydra of rebellion was suppressed in Massachusetts. One of the immediate ancestors of our candidate fell a victim to the barbarous Indian warfare which marked our Ohio frontiers three-quarters of a century since. Indeed our standard-bearer must be unworthy of the classic recollections clustering round his name, be recreant to the memory of his fathers, and his blood thinned by base admixtures, if he have not the high courage and heroic energy necessary to put down and crush out all attempts at secession and disunion, come from what quarter they may.—*Phila. Mr. Fowler's Sureties.

Judge Betts has granted an injunction restraining the United States Marshal from levying upon the property of Messrs. Law and Connover, sureties to the late postmaster. The serious charges against the post office department, of a concealment of facts within the knowledge of the department in relation to the deficiencies, entitles the sureties, in the opinion of the judge, to sufficient delay to admit the investigation of these charges. The strong ground taken is, that Fowler was a defaulter when the bond was executed, and that the department knew it. Two issues will be tried by order of the judge; one upon the facts, before a jury, and the other upon law as to the concealment of facts by government, if such concealment is proven.

It is premature to anticipate the judgment of the courts. If the charge is sustained, the department is disgraced, the money lost, and the bondsmen free. In any case, the sureties will probably escape, and the cost of their prosecution have to be added to the deficiency which has given Fowler unenviable rank with Price and Swartwout.—N. Y. Herald.

Edmond About's New Pamphlet—Prussia and Germany.

[Correspondence of the London Times.]

BERLIN, June 15th, 1860.

I fear that M. de la Guerroniere is about to be superseded in his post of pamphlet-writer in ordinary, for he seems to have a dangerous rival to dispute the laurels with him. His rival is the well known M. About, who has just brought out a pamphlet with the title of "L'Empereur Napoleon III. et la Prusse," were the second part of "Le Pape et le Congres." I have glanced very hastily over M. About's production, and have time to extract merely the following passages:

"Whether the Germans know it or not the friendship of a nation like ours is at present of a certain value. The time is no longer that when the majority of the French, despoiled of their political rights for the advantage of a coterie, protested in vain against the ruin of our interests and the oppression of our friends. It is no longer by the speeches of a vain opposition in the chambers, nor by the cries of children in the streets, that France manifests her good will for those she loves; it is by acts. Soldiers have been seen to hasten to the farthest quarter of the Black Sea to retard the fall of the Ottoman empire, while her diplomatists demanded of Turkey herself the civil and religious emancipation of the Christian population. The deliverance has not been forgotten of the Moldo-Wallachians, who were united into a nation and endowed with all political rights by the sole influence of our friendship, without the shedding of blood. Italy, the august mother of our civilization and of our arts, has entered, under the auspices of France, on the road of independence and unity. Our armies opened the path in which she now walks alone under the direction of Piedmont. If God grant that this great work shall be accomplished, and that a nation of 26,000,000 of men shall be organized at our gates, France will take no offence. Faithful to her generous traditions, she will sacrifice her private susceptibilities to the general good, and to the future of peace, for European order cannot be solidly established except on the day when there shall be no longer nationalities oppressed nor kings insupportable to their people."

"Since the accession of Napoleon III., and particularly since the annexation of Savoy, German publicists, perhaps even German princes, have pretty loudly manifested an unjust mistrust of the French policy. They will absolutely have it that we have a plan for annexing the Rhenish provinces and encroaching on the German soil. This ill-founded fear is expressed with so much clamor, and repeated with such obstinacy, that it might suggest to us bad thoughts if we were less just. It is certain that if you accosted in the street the mildest and most inoffensive of men, and if you said to him, 'Sir, you mean to slap me in the face; it is in vain for you to say no; I am well informed that you mean to give me a slap in the face; do not swear to the contrary; I would not believe your oath; you intend to give me a slap in the face, but I am stronger than you, and I by no means fear you; I would crush you as I would a fly, and I defy you to give me a slap in the face; the most inoffensive and mildest man would add by finding excellent reasons for giving what is asked of him, and the slap in the face would fall of itself on the cheek of him who provoked it."

"We are happy to learn," says he, "that German unity has found its centre, and nothing would be more agreeable than to see that nation group itself round a firm mind and an upright heart. If nothing arrests the progress of this pacific revolution, we may hope that the princes themselves, carried along by the movements of their people, will submit to the protecting power of Prussia, and that Germany will unite without a drop of blood being spilt. Diplomacy will raise no objection to this internal reform. An Austrian Germany, uniting in the same band more than 70,000,000 of men, would menace the equilibrium of Europe and render the powers disquieted; but a Prussian Germany, with 32,000,000 of citizens, will alarm no one.

"But the Prince of Prussia would commit a dangerous mistake, if he thought that the national movement is strong enough to do without assistance. Whatever be the violence of impulse which draws the mass of the Germans towards the Prussian monarchy, all judicious minds will resist the current and keep back, if the court of Berlin does not advance towards them. Democratic Germany is prudent and patriotic enough to rally round a king, but it will expect guarantees which the Prussian constitution does not offer at the present day.

"It is necessary, above all, that the Court of Prussia should choose between the two principles which divide Europe. Divine right and popular rights are face to face. While a certain number of princes are obstinately clinging to a false legitimacy, empires truly legitimate are founded on the democratic basis of universal suffrage. The King of Naples affirms that his people belong to him, and the nation offers to this pretended right an armed denial. The Emperor of the French and the King of Sardinia declare, with modern philosophy, that a people belongs only to itself, and two great nations, by a vote almost unanimous, elect them for their chiefs. Does the Prince of Prussia hold with the King of Naples, for divine right, or for popular rights, with the King of Sardinia and the Emperor of the French. He must choose.

"The thing is all the more necessary as the King of Prussia had chosen, and very badly chosen, in 1849. The National Assembly, the issue of universal suffrage, offered him in his palace a legitimate crown. How did he answer. He declared for divine right against popular right; he also declared that he would not accept any crown that was not decreed to him by the princes. The Prussian squirearchy applauded this anti-democratic resolution, and history recorded the form in which they expressed their assent: 'We do not desire,' they said, 'a crown on which democracy has thrown its spittle.'"

REMARKS OF THE LONDON TIMES.

[From the London Times, June 18.]

This pamphlet is the turning of the first sod; it is the opening of the first parallel; it is the first spadeful of earth out of the sap. "If you [illegible] always in a flutter about the designs of France; if you will insist that we are fixed upon the design of the frontier of the Rhine, you will provoke, and even actually compel us, to take that frontier." Austria has heard this before, and so has Piedmont. Belgium has also heard it, and it has been tried even upon England. It is the old common form. A little ordinary sagacity would enable any one to mark out the future states of the proceeding even down to the Grand Cross bestowed on the Minister by whom the affair will be hermetically sealed. We can see it all as easily as Professor Owen can draw a sea serpent from a cast scale or a dropped fang. It will progress somewhat in this wise: At a convenient period we shall hear that Napoleon III. is distressed at the oppression which the conscription exercises upon the industry of his country. He will awake to the conviction that an army of 700,000 men is an anachronism in the nineteenth century. He will by that time have looked carefully at England, and will have found that she has for many years continued to hold her rank as a first-class power with a fraction of this force. And why has she done so? his meditating majesty will ask. Simply "because she has no frontiers," his suddenly enlightened majesty will answer. The next natural step in the imperial cogitations will be: And why should not France be in this respect like England? Why should France have any frontiers? She has even now almost arrived at that beatitude. On the west and north-west she has the sea. On the south and south-east—thanks to recent acquisitions—she has great mountain ranges. On the north she has the neutralized kingdom of Belgium. On the east she has Switzerland, also neutralized. But, alas! between Strasbourg and Belgium there is an unprotected line—a break in the frontier wall through which all the armies of Europe may at any time pour, and which requires half a million of men to keep France secure from invasion. Almost within sight of Baden Baden the peaks of the Vosges mountains may be counted. They are all French by natural position, but some of them are Bavarian by unjust treaties, and these are as dangerous to France as were the slopes of the Alps to Savoy. Then Prussia comes in, presenting a flat frontier and first-class fortresses. How can France be at peace while her frontier lie thus open? Behind this unprotected flat line of territory lies a broad river, which is a natural boundary of itself. If France could push forward thus far she would be secure. She would then have nothing to fear, and leave the world at peace.

Is Prussia willing to play Piedmont, if France is ready to fight a campaign in Germany like that she fought in Lombardy, taking a modest compensation to herself and throwing a large booty to her accomplice?

Archbishop Hughes.

The New York Independent, commenting on the Archbishops refusing to obey the law, obligatory on all clergymen, in relation to marriage certificates for public record, says:

In one word, it amounts to this, that because the Roman Church has seen fit to make marriage a sacrament, therefore the State has nothing to do with it, and the Church has exclusive jurisdiction in the premises. The absurdity and effrontery of the claim are too evident to need argument. No man needs to be told, that marriage is a civil as well as religious relation, that the most vital interest of society are involved in it, that upon its certification the courts make their most important decisions to proceed, and therefore while each religious sect may solemnize the rite by such ceremonies as it may please, no sect has, or can have, such jurisdiction as to withhold the fact, or disobey reasonable requirements necessary to give it legal proof. Bishop Hughes, therefore, places himself in conflict, not only with the State, and the general well-being, but equally with the welfare of his own people; and parties to marriages solemnized by himself would, if they understood their rights and interests, be the first to complain of his foolish and offensive assumption of power. The principles avowed in the Archbishop's letter, if soberly examined, involve the most daring assault, ever made by the Papacy, upon our institutions; they go to the extent of asserting not only the independence of the Church, but in all joint concerns the subjugation of the State! It reveals the fact that Roman Hierarchy is the same thing in America that it is in Sardinia; and that the Archbishop of New York is emulous of rivalling the insubordination of his brother Archbishop of Florence; the supporter of absolutism in Italy is the assistant of Republicanism in New York!

From the Louisville Journal.

☞ John Par has been preaching Republicanism in one of the counties of North Carolina. If he isn't careful, he'll get into hot water and be Par-boiled.

☞ The editor of the New York News says that he can't express his feelings. We congratulate his readers.

☞ An exchange thinks we had better not get after Mrs. Swisshelm. We are aware that it would be a wild goose chase.

☞ It seems a rather curious paradox that the Douglas and Breckinridge factions are both extreme ones and both mean ones.

☞ A Republican organ says that in the contest between Lincoln and Douglas, the former "pierced his opponent with a keen rapier at every point." We have heard that Lincoln was "cunning at fence."

☞ In Virginia, the Breckinridge men are very anxious that there should be only one Democratic Electoral ticket. They earnestly implore the friends of Douglas not to throw obstacles in the way, but to stand up and be sacrificed with cheerfulness.

"Will you walk into my parlor?" Said the spider to the fly, &c.

MOVEMENTS OF THE PEOPLE.

EDWARDS COUNTY.—A meeting of the Republicans of Edwards, and adjoining counties, was held at Albion on Friday of last week, to ratify the Chicago and Decatur nominations. Notwithstanding the short notice given, and the busy time among farmers, who are in the midst of their wheat harvest, the attendance was very large. Delegates from Grayville, Scottville, New Salem, and the surrounding country, gathered in town at an early hour. At one o'clock a fine pole, one hundred feet high, was raised, bearing the stripes and stars, amid the shouts of the multitude. Immediately thereafter, a procession was formed, bearing banners, fence-rails, mauls, and other campaign emblems, which marched to the Court House, where the multitude were addressed by Col. Harrow of Vincennes, in a speech which carried his audience with him. At the conclusion of Col. Harrow's speech, the meeting adjourned to evening, when a torchlight procession, numbering several hundred persons, again marched to the Court House, when the crowd was addressed by W. H. Robinson, of Wayne Co., assistant elector for the IXth District; Geo. Fitch, Esq., and Gen. Wm. Pickering. Among those present at this meeting, was Col. James Gray, the original proprietor of the town of Grayville, formerly of Kentucky, an old Whig veteran, and an elector for Henry Clay in 1824. His spirits are buoyant with hope and enthusiasm for the success of the Republican cause. Edwards is the only county in Illinois that gave Fillmore a majority in 1856, but the Fillmore men are wheeling into line and doing battle for Honest Abe Lincoln, the old friend of Henry Clay, and the noble champion of the rights of the people.

IOWA.—We have a long letter from a friend at Burlington, which the crowded state of our columns prevents us publishing. It gives a most encouraging account of the progress of correct principles in Iowa. On Saturday evening last the Wide-Awakes of Burlington, headed by a fine band of music, paid their respects to Col. Fitz Henry Warren, who responded to the compliment by an eloquent speech. They propose having the biggest meeting ever held west of the Mississippi at Burlington, in a short time. Our friends in Iowa propose to give Lincoln and Hamlin 20,000 majority over the combined force of the enemy, or 30,000 over the Douglas faction. This is larger than we have hoped, but it may reach that figure.

A BRECKINRIDGE AND LANE TICKET TO BE RUN IN IOWA.—At a meeting of Breckinridge and Lane men in Davenport on Saturday last it was resolved that "a clean electoral ticket for Breckinridge and Lane be nominated for the support of the people of Iowa."

GONE UP.—The old Grad Aus, but more recently Daily Volksblatt, a German Democratic paper, published at Milwaukee, has been crushed by the "irrepressible conflict," and ceased to exist.

SENSIBLE.—Col. Richardson, of El Kader, Iowa, an old Line Whig, who until recently stood aloof from the Republican organization, has like most of his brethren of the same faith, declared in favor of Lincoln and Hamlin.

OHIO.—At a Republican Convention held in Belmont county on the 30th ult., James Weir and Clifford Arick, both of whom have been prominent and active Democrats, declared themselves for Lincoln and Hamlin, as did also L. C. Danford, a Fillmore elector in 1856, and Dr. W. W. Jenkins, Chairman of the County Convention that organized the Constitutional Union party in Belmont county.

Mr. Breckinridge is the youngest candidate ever nominated for the Presidency. He is but 38 years of age—only three years beyond the age required by the Constitution for that office.—All our Exchanges.

Mr. Breckinridge was born on the 21st of January, 1821, and will consequently be 40 years old on the 21st day of next January. He was constitutionally eligible to the office of President when he ran for Vice President in 1856, or he would not have been put upon the ticket.

A CHANCE FOR REPUBLICAN CAPITAL.

Republican jugglers are loud in claiming that Douglas cannot carry his own State of Illinois. If any such have the dimes to back up their opinion with, we learn that Mr. Schissler of Galena will accommodate them. That gentleman offers to bet $2,500 that Douglas will carry Illinois, and as the Republicans of Galena do not feel willing to take him up, invites the Republicans or any of them to accept the wager.—Dubuque Herald.

MR. EDITOR: Observing the notice in your paper yesterday morning, a party waited upon Mr. Schlisser, authorized to take up the said bet of $2,500. Mr. Schissler informed us that the proposition in the Dubuque Herald was published without his knowledge or consent, and that he did not wish to take any such bet. This is published with Mr. Schissler's consent. C. & E.—Galena Advertiser.

The News from Europe.

The latest intelligence from Europe is of deep significance. It shows that the Italian movement is progressing not only satisfactorily but rapidly. The Neapolitan troops have been recalled to Naples, because they could not be relied upon. Lanza and their other commanders have been sent to the famous, or, rather infamous State prison at Ischia, where so many political victims have expiated their crimes against the government in chains and torture. Garibaldi is organizing a levy en masse of the Sicilians, for a dash at Naples itself, leaving Messina to be dealt with hereafter. The terrified King looks in vain to England, France and Austria for assistance. England is, in fact, openly aiding and abbetting the patriots, so far as she can do so without declaring war in their behalf. The two steamers, laden with volunteers and muskets, captured by the Neapolitan frigate, had Sardinian passports for Malta, a British possession. Strange that they should be going there! Nevertheless, on this fact the Sardinian and British Ministers have demanded the restitution of them; and the captains have added to this demand a claim for an indemnity of 20,000 ducats, which it is to be hoped, Francis II will be made to pay, if he be not driven from his throne before he has time to write an order on his treasury for the amount. His envoy to London and Paris has fared but poorly on his errand. In short, the days of the Bourbons in Italy are numbered. The misrule of that infatuated and incapable family is about to meet with its merited termination. Expelled from France, Parma, and Naples, there will remain only Spain to undergo the process of purification; and then the family will be one more added to the list of extinct dynasties to be consigned to the tomb of all the Capulets; or buried with Cheops under the great pyramid.

Garibaldi appears to entertain some doubts as to the courage and earnestness of the Neapolitans. There are thousands of privileged beggars and idle vagabonds in the capital, who are known by the same Lazzaroni, whose business is to loll in the shade and live upon charity and thieving. Their number has been estimated at about twenty thousand in the city of Naples alone, and as they are parties who will suffer more than any other by the establishment of a firm and enlightened government, they will be ripe for any treachery or bloody work the tyrant may find for them. The threat of arming the Lazzaroni has been found sufficient before now to keep in awe. These wretches are the sans culottes and demons of every emeutes in the south of Italy, and the atrocities they have committed will bear comparison with those of the first French revolution. The purgation of these gentry from the land will be little less service than the expulsion of the Bourbon. A few weeks more will solve the Italian question, and settle it, we hope to the satisfaction of the friends of liberty.—Philadelphia North American.

Maine Politics.

The manner in which the campaign has been opened on both sides in Maine, and the circumstances under which the battle is to be fought, furnish evidence of a lively contest. With the exception of Vermont, where the Republican party does not have opposition enough to make any kind of a victory interesting to outsiders, the voice of Maine on the second Monday in September will be regarded as the first indication of the Presidential struggle in November. Of course, the Republicans will carry the State, high and dry. Hamlin's majority of 18,000 in 1856, Morrill's nearly 9,000 in 1858, and nearly 12,000 last year, leave no possible doubt of that result. Mr. Washburne can go into the Gubernatorial chair on a majority of 15,000 votes, even if the campaign is left to take care of itself—which it will not be, by a great deal.

But the State is so unfairly apportioned among the Congressional Districts, that the Republicans may have a fair total majority, and yet stand a chance of losing three Representatives in Congress. Thus, in 1858, Gov. Morrill was elected by 8,942 majority; but Mr. Somes, in the first district, prevailed by 455 votes, Mr. French, in the third, by only 63, and Mr. Foster, in the sixth, by 495 votes. There was, indeed, such talk of contesting the seats of the latter gentlemen, but it faded away prematurely. This year, however, a determined effort will be made to carry these districts against the Republicans, and on that basis to raise a tremendous hue and cry about Republican reaction, and all that sort of thing.

The Telegraph vs the Facts.

[From the Manchester, N. H., Democrat.]

From all that we can learn, the Douglas demonstration at Concord on Wednesday evening was as complete a failure as the one in Manchester. There was no enthusiasm, no confidence, and almost an entire absence of the leading men of the party. Yet both these meetings are announced by telegraph as "tremendous demonstrations!" We do not know the fellow whom the Democracy employ to act as news agent for the Associated Press in this city, but we do know the chap at Concord—John M. Hill, and a more unscrupulous demagogue cannot be found in the whole party. False and grossly exaggerated reports sent broadcast over the country are Douglas tricks which significantly show the weakness of their cause.

New Paper in Cincinnati.

We have heard from various sources that a new paper is to be started in Cincinnati to advocate the election of Breckinridge and Lane. Wm. D. Morgan, of Newark, it is said, is to assume the editorial control. Mr. Morgan is the ablest Democratic editor in the State, and will give the Enquirer a hard chase.

☞ Can't the Democracy, when they fire political salutes, hit upon some ingenious expedient to let us know whether they are shooting Douglas guns or Breckinridge guns? We shall certainly be very much obliged to them if they can and will.

☞ The New York Leader is hard on the Japanese Princes. We can hardly credit its statements regarding the personal cleanliness of the Japanese, seeing that it is their custom to take a bath daily. These people may have the blood of a thousand generations of Kamis in their veins; their ancestors may have been leading actors in the massacres which, at a much more recent period, deluged their Island with Christian blood;—they may themselves be as "noble" as the proudest member of the British peerage. Yet this is the style in which the Leader treats them:

A meaner set of barbarians our eyes had never the misfortune to rest upon. Stunted, ill-shaped, narrow-headed, yellow-skinned, high smelling, ferret-eyed, flat-footed, greedy and cunning—it makes the very blood tingle through every vein when we reflect that the virtue of American womanhood has been slandered and called in question on account of such half-human abominations. Not a man in the Embassy knew the meaning of cleanliness. The "Princes," (God save the mark!) had but two suits of silk-clothes each, which they were without change of under-clothing, from the day they left Nyphon until to-day.

We are very much afraid that such language as this will give color to the belief, that the Americans have no reverence whatever for high rank and noble birth.

BY MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

I have been now many weeks in this sad old city—sad, somber is must always be—with its moldering ruins—its wide surrounding Campagna—and its park-eyed, poetic looking people, whom even dirt and rags cannot make vulgar or common place. I went to the top of the Capitol the other morning. It was a clear, lovely day, and as we stood in the little stone balcony of the crowning tower, the custode counted out to us the seven hills of Rome—now scarcely to be distinguished, covered with buildings. We saw how the old city had been cradled on all sides, like some gigantic infant, in a circle of surrounding mountains, which, rising now in snowy, silvery clearness, seemed to cut the blue horizon all around.

In the spring of the year, the snow upon these mountains gives them, through the purple vail of Italian air, all the picturesque and dreamy grace of Alpine peaks. Their outlines are, many of them, peculiarly bold and graceful; and one looks on them with interest because they are features of the landscape that could not have changed. Such as they are to us this morning, such they looked to Cicero and Virgil and to Cæsar—to thousands of eyes now shut forever.

One thing strikes one in a panorama of Rome—the deficiency in trees. As one stands on the top of the capitol, nothing like foliage strikes the eye in that great circle of country, bounded by mountains and centered by Rome. No groves—no forests—no tufts of trees—oak, ash, poplar, and consequent variations of undulating outline. There are but two trees which make much impression on one's eyes in the picture; and these are the cypress and stone pine, and both have forms of such stony definiteness of outline, that I call them architectural trees. They look as if they too might have been carved out of stone, like the pyramids, obelisks, and domes among which they rise, black and still, with no sway of leaf or spray, with no flutter or wave of bough, quiet and lifeless, as if they belonged to that enchanted city one reads of in romance, where everything was suddenly turned to stone.

To me the sense of an oppressive deadness, a heavy lifeless stillness, seems to be the general spirit of this landscape—as if some awful doom, some spell of sinister enchantment, made the air preternaturally heavy, as one sometimes feels it before a thunder storm. From the Capitol one looks down at the broken columns of the Forum far below at one's feet, and the endless train of workmen digging all day among the ruins, and wheeling their barrows in a slow line toward the Coliseum, seems a sort of spectral procession—so lifelessly they work, so slowly they move, their ragged old cloaks still thrown over their shoulder in ghostly suggestion of the old Roman toga. Ruins of men—shadows of Romans—dark-eyed, hollow-cheeked, picking aimlessly at the grave of old Rome, powerless and unreflecting—five cents a day their wages, and their work according. There they pick feebly over spots where the old hard-handed, plebeians of Rome made good their cause in many a hard election, bringing in their tribunes of the people in the face of all that patrician rank and power could do. Surely these are ghosts of Romans in a ghostly forum.

The coloring that invests the whole landscape of Rome is of that wondrous brightness, that golden richness of tone, which almost reconciles one to the want of freshness and green, and of that vivacious motion which pervades an English or American landscape.

The peculiar orange-colored lichen which clings to buildings here gives a golden tone to every roof, and the air shimmers at every hour of the day with fluttering prismatic lights and warm shadows. Even the black obelisk of the cypress and the umbrella-shaped stone pine have their opalescent changings of purple, lilac, and gold as a morning or evening floods them with light. One does not wonder that artists fall in love with old Rome—the mistress of enchantments—and that they say, to her, in dirt, in rags, in filth, in ignominy, "Thou art my mistress. I would not change thee for the cleanliest and sweetest good housewife in the world." One only wants to drop humanity out of their calculation, to live merely in the artistic and picturesque, to feel thus themselves. One feels the enchantment working—the weird old sybil tells upon you.

But let us come down from our airy perch on the Capitol, and descend bodily into the Forum below. Fifteen feet below the level of modern Rome it lies—a wreck of columns and temples—the pavement of the old Sacred Way going through it, under the triumphal arch of Septimus Severus. Here one may see the old foundations laid in the time of republican Rome, some three thousand years ago. In a sunny spring day, when the wind above is blowing the dust in your eyes, as I am sorry to say March winds always do whether in Rome or Andover, it is quite a sheltered place to walk in this crumbling old Forum. You are admitted through a rude door at the side, kept by a janitor, who expects two pauls for his pains, and then it is all before you. You can scramble about among the old ruins, finding here a shattered bit of inscription, there an overturned capital of a Corinthian column — picking up here and there bits of porphyry, serpentine, oriental granite, rosso antico, and African marble. Birds chitter and sing and dive and soar among the tops of the old pillars. You climb up old stairways leading to nothing, and find your way under vaulted arches, where the damp walls are green and waving with tremulous maiden-hair. Antiquarians quarrel over this Forum, and exercise their ingenuity in rebuilding it this way or that. To me the matter is of small account—whether it extended ten feet this way or that—whether this bit of pavement is of this or that era—is all one to me. I have no objection to him who settles it; if any one knows, I am glad of it—but the enjoyment to me is far greater to let it all rest in a vague generality. Here and hereabouts was the Forum. Here without dispute we see the general ground over which this old energetic, poetic, yet practical, race lived and moved when they wove a history and made laws and institutions which have shaped even our present selves—without which we could not have been what we are. Take out of our language every Latin word—out of our present stock of our thought every one born from the institutions of Rome—and what a curious remainder there would be!

The Romans were utilitarians—materialists—much like the Anglo-Saxons, and yet they were poets. It is the anti material and poetic part of them that has sharpened the edge by which they have driven their history firm into human sympathy and consciousness. What makes Roman history so full of interest to a child? What but the multitude of romances of pathos, and feeling, and heroic sacrifice, that gem it like stars? Quintus Curtius springing horse and all with one bound into the abyss, when he or his country must perish; Virginius stabbing his best beloved for honor's sake; Mutius Scævola burning off his right hand in the fire; Regulus, the slave of honor, returning to torture and to death for truth spoken to his country. Stories such as these it is that breathe and burn yet; such as these enchant these old stones, and make this waving maiden-hair, that clothes the deserted arches, seem unlike that which waves unstoried under the damp shade of an Andover forest. It is this vague spirit that haunts this place, makes it so lovely to be here, and to wander about peaceably among the ruins; but this all takes flight before the measuring tools of the antiquarian.

I protest, too, against all modern histories of Rome that intermeddle with the dear old historic legends. Because a German professor has nothing to do but build up a new historic theory, shall we give up Romulus and Remus and the she-wolf, most revered of quadrupeds? If these things were not true, they ought to have been, and one must hold on to them. For my part I clasp my Rollin to my heart, and say, as the Duke of Wellington did, when a certain officer pretended that his resignation of office was a mistake, There is no mistake, and there shall be none.

Histories have their fashions. In one century it is all the mode to abuse an author; the world takes the ball in its mouth, and runs off with it like a frisky young puppy—but the next age comes; and lo! "tour anour change toute cela," the old history is on its feet again. Herodotus was pleasantly called the father of lies. Now he bids fair to be the standard of truth; and in this faith I quietly enjoy my Forum by the light of a small abridgement of Goldsmith's Rome, helped on by Macaulay's Lays, which, like everything he ever wrote, give more graphic and better historic ideas in a glowing phrase than whole volumes of tedious details of the most weeping antiquarian.—N. Y. Independent.

LIFE'S PICTURES.

The Heir of Linn.

There is as beautiful a Scotch ballad by this title, as I ever saw in my life; it made a very strong impression upon me; but, as the ballad is not to be found, I will endeavor to tell the story in plain prose.

The Laird of Linn, in Galway, was one of the richest landed proprietors in Scotland. Besides the lands and dwellings, he had flocks and herds, and a good stock of gold. Moreover, he was a man of frugal and parsimonious disposition, so that the men of Galway avoided his company, and the whole town cried shame on him. Nevertheless, his riches grew and increased to a mighty sum, and there was no telling what heaps of treasure he had snugly concealed.

The Laird of Linn did not marry till late in life, and his wife died within a year after his marriage. She left him one child, a son, who was the joy and plague of his existence. Though naturally of a noble and generous temper, he was wild, reckless and extravagant. Seeing and hearing his father ridiculed every day, for his miserly temper and habits, he resolved at all events not to be like him, and spent all he could lay his hands on, among low, dissolute companions, in riotous living—so true it is that one extreme often produces another. It was in vain that his father remonstrated with him; he only grew worse as he grew older.

At last, the Laird of Linn lay on his deathbed. He had out-lived all his near relations, and he had no friends, so that he was obliged to leave all his substance to his son, and, beside, next to his gold, he loved his prodigal heir. Previous to his death, he called the heir of Linn to his bedside, and thus spoke:

"My son, when my lips are cold in death, and my tongue silent in the grave, I know how it will be with you. You will spend all the substance of your ancestors, and all the gold I got together, in dissipation and extravagance. Nevertheless, I do not wish my son to live a beggar. Therefore give heed to my only dying command, and if you disregard it, may a father's dying curse cling to you. The upper chamber of my house in Kippletringan is now locked up, and I have thrown the key into the sea. When you have lost both gold and lands, when you have not a friend who will lend you a baubee, and when you are actually suffering for a crust to appease your hunger, break the door open, and you will find a certain relief; but, if you open the door before that time, I say again, may a father's curse cling to you."

With these words, the old man fell back and expired.

The heir of Linn did not grieve long for his parent. He soon after threw upon his house to all comers. His forests fell beneath the axe. His chimneys were always smoking; a hundred men sat daily at his board, and he bought horses and hounds, and lent money without counting it, to his dissolute companions. He jested, and drank, and gambled, as if he could not get rid of his substance in all these ways; he took no care of his affairs, but gave up the guidance of them to a bailiff, or steward, named John of Scales, who was a knave, and a notorious usurer. John cheated his master in a variety of ways, and put more than half his rent in his own pocket.

At last, what the heir of Linn's father had foreseen came to pass. His money was all gone, and he had no means of keeping up his excesses, except by selling his lands; but no one was rich enough to buy them, except John of Scales, and every one knew how he came by his money. The young Laird was desperately in want of cash to pay his gaming debts, and was, moreover heated with wine, when the unjust steward offered to buy his estate. It was a hard case, but, after much discussion, he agreed upon the bargain.

"Give me your gold, good John of Scales, and my lands shall be yours forever," said the heir of Linn.

Then John counted down the good, clean gold, and a hard bargain his master had of it. For every pound that John agreed, the land was worth three.

The last money went like the first, and the heir of Linn was a beggar. He first went to the house that had once been his own, but now belonged to John of Scales, to seek some relief. He looked into the window of the great banqueting hall, but there was no feasting going on in it. The fire was out, and the dinner table taken away, and all was desolate and dismal. "Here's sorry cheer," says the heir of Linn.

John would not give him a penny, but told him to go to the friends he had spent so much money upon foolishly. He did so, but it did no good. Some pretended not to know him, and no one would lend him a farthing, or even offer him a dinner, so he wandered about forlorn and hungry for two days; for work he could not, and to beg he was ashamed. At last, in his extreme misery, he bethought himself of his father's dying words: "I have not sold the house in Kippletringan yet," said he, "for no one would buy it. I will go and break open the upper chamber. My father said I would find relief there, and perhaps he meant treasure. If it should prove so, I will be a wiser man than I was, and not waste it on knaves." * * * * * To the house then he went, and broke the chamber door open. He found relief, indeed!

There was nothing in the room except a high stool, and directly over it a halter dangling from a hook in the ceiling. He looked up and read these words:

"Ah! graceless wretch, and wanton fool! You are ruined forever. This is the only relief for those who have wasted their patrimony, as you have done. Behold then—put the halter around your neck, and jump from the stool, and save your family from the disgrace of beggary."

"Very excellent counsel," said the heir of Linn; "and as I must either hang or starve, I think I'll take my father's advice and hang. It is the shortest death of the two."

So he mounted, fastened the halter around his neck, and kicked the stool from under.

But the heir of Linn was not to die so. The board into which the hook was driven gave way with his weight, and he fell on the floor with a shower of gold coin rattling about his ears. I will not say that he felt no pain in the neck the next day, but at that moment he certainly felt none; joy rushed into his heart like a torrent, at seeing himself rescued from death and beggary. The space between the ceiling and the roof contained an enormous treasury. On the upper side of the board from which he thought to suspend himself was fastened a letter addressed to him. He hastily tore it open and read as follows:

"My dear son, I know your character, and no expostulation or advice can wean you from the desperate course you are pursuing. Nothing but misery, sharper than death, can work the cure on you. If, therefore, your misfortunes and sufferings should be so grievous that you prefer death to their endurance, you will not rashly encounter them again. You have made the trial; take my gold, redeem your lands, and become a better man."

The heir of Linn did not leave the spot without putting up a prayer to Heaven for the soul of a parent whose admirable wisdom had discovered the means of raising him from beggary and despair to affluence, and of weaning him from the follies and vices which had so disgraced his character. To evince his gratitude, he resolved to amend his life from that day forward, and become all a father's heart could wish.

But he first thought he would make one more trial of his false friends, on whom he had wasted his time, his substance and his character. He therefore kept his newly discovered wealth a great secret, until he heard that John of Scales was to give a great entertainment, and all the lords and ladies of Galway were to be there.

When the heir of Linn entered his father's hall, it was crowded with richly dressed gentry, but he was in beggar's rags. He appealed to the charity of the company, saying he was starving. To one he said, "you have dined at my board a thousand times: will you deny me the crumbs that fall from your own?" To another, "I gave you a pair of steeds and trappings." And to another he said, "I lent you a thousand pounds, and never asked you to repay me; and so on to all the rest of the company. But instead of remembering his favors, they reviled him, and called him a spendthrift, beggar and all manner of vile names. Some said it was a shame that such a wretched looking object should be suffered to come among them; and one to whom, more than all the rest, his purse had been open, called on his servant to thrust him out of doors.

But one man took his part. It was master Richard Lackland, a poor, younger son of a wealthy gentleman. He stood up and said, "I never ate at the board of the heir of Linn; I never rode his horses, or shared his purse or received a favor of him to the amount of a farthing. But what then? He was a worthy gentleman when he had the means. I have twelve golden nobles, and that is all I possess in the world, and there are six of them at the service of the man whose hand was never shut to the poor. And as I am a gentleman, no man shall lay a finger on him while I wear a sword."

A glad man was the heir of Linn to find one man worthy to be his friend. He took the six nobles, and advanced towards John of Scales, who was standing at the end of he hall, attired in gorgeous apparel.

"You, at least," said the heir of Linn, "ought to relieve my necessities, for you have grown rich on my ruin, and I gave you a good bargain for my lands."

Then John of Scales began to revile him, and to declare that he had given him much more than the lands were worth; for he did not like to be reminded of his extortion before so goodly a company.

"Nay," said he to the heir of Linn, "if you will but return to me half what I paid for your father's estate, you shall have it back again."

"Perhaps I will find friends who will lend me the sum—therefore give a promise under your hand and seal, and I will see what can be done."

John of Scales knew that but few people of the country had so much money, even if it were a common thing to lend money to a beggar, and he had just seen what reliance was to be placed upon friends in such a case. He had not the least idea that the heir of Linn would ever be the owner of the hundredth part of that sum. He therefore called for pen, ink, and paper, and sat down before the company and wrote the promise, and right scornfully gave it to his former master.

Then the heir of Linn strode to the window and opened it, and took a bugle from a tattergabertine, and blew it till the joists and rafters shook with the din. Presently a fair troop of servants rode up, well armed and mounted, leading a mule with them, laden with treasure. They dismounted and brought the bags of gold into the hall.

"My father's lands are my own again," cried the heir of Linn joyously, and before the company had recovered from their astonishment, he had counted down to John of Scales just the sum he had agreed to take. Then turning to his servants, he said:

"Scourge me this viper out of the house of Linn with dog whips." And it was immediately done.

The company crowded around him to congratulate him on receiving his patrimony, and excusing their own neglect and ingratitude. But he said to them:

"Caitiffs, slaves, dogs, begone! Pollute the floor of my house no longer! If you enter my grounds again, I will have my servants loose the hounds upon you!"

To Master Lackland he said: "Come to my arms, come to my heart, my brother! Live in my home, and share with the heir of Linn in all things." And the heir of Linn became another man, and an ornament to his country, and a blessing to his tenants.

MONETARY.

THURSDAY EVENING, July 5, 1860.

Exchange went down to-day to 1½, a concession which will be gratefully received by the mercantile public. In the street it sold at 1@1½. The banks bought at 1. The market seems to be tending downward.

Gold 1¼, with not very active demand. Currency abundant.

ANOTHER COUNTERFEIT.—Another counterfeit made its appearance in the street to-day. One of our sharp eyed bank clerks who detected it, has handed us the following description of the bill:

New Haven County Bank, Ct., 3s spurious, vig. in center, a farm scene; on right lower corner a female; three above; 3 on upper left corner, female with sheaf of grain below, three underneath. The bill is red tinted and presents a tidy appearance, and those who are not acquainted with the genuine issues of the Bank, it would almost invariably deceive.

The only safe way for general dealers will be to reject all three dollar bills on the New Haven County Bank.

The Fulton, with Liverpool advices to the 28th ult., was telegraphed this morning. Wheat was 1d lower, and Corn was reported dull and slightly declined.

The light receipts of Corn to-day rendered the market at the opening buoyant, and the price of No. 1 ran up from 46½@47½c. The arrival of the Fulton, however, checked the upward tendency, and the market for a time became dull till New York came in, when it closed steady at 47@47½c—an advance of ½@1c. About 120,000 bushels changed hands, at 46½@47c for No. 2 Canal afloat; 46½@47½c for No. 1; 45½@46½c for No. 2; and 42½@43c for Rejected. Flour was quiet, and the sales limited at $4.80@ and in good demand, and prices advanced ½@1c with sales of 14,000 bushels at $1.07½ for No. 1 Spring; $1.06@1.07½ for No. 2 Spring; and 90@91c for Rejected. The amount in store here is trifling, and at the close holders were very firm. Oats were in fair request and steady at 26½c in store. Rye and Barley nominal. Highwines firm, with limited sales of city manufactured at 18½c, and country at 18½c. Alcohol, 37c. Provisions quiet but firm. Hides unchanged. Wool in good demand and steady.

Freights continue steady. Two propellers were engaged at 3½c for Oats, 5c for Corn, and 6c for Wheat to Buffalo; and five sail vessels at 5c for Corn to Buffalo and Dunkirk, and 7c to Oswego.

THE TIMBER AND LUMBER TRADE IN CANADA.—The Toronto Globe of yesterday has the following:

The timber and lumber trade this season has thus far been very successful, and the prospects for the remainder of the year are equally good. The timber operations on the Ottawa were as large, if not larger than usual on the Trent and Bay of Quinte considerable; and along the line of the Northern and Grand Trunk Railways vast quantities have been got out. On the shores of Lake Erie the greatest activity prevailed, and a much larger amount than usual has been put afloat. The unusual quantity of tonnage to Quebec this season is the best indication of the probable extent of the timber trade.

THE TWO ROUTES TO THE OCEAN.—The Toronto Globe says:

It is a singular and rather startling fact that square timber can be shipped from Canadian ports on Lake Erie to England much cheaper by the New York Canals than by the St. Lawrence, yet such is actually the case. One of the largest timber firms of Western Canada is just now sending forward a very large amount of square timber via Buffalo, Albany, and New York, and thence to England at a saving of one third on the rates via the Welland Canal, the St. Lawrence and Quebec. Efforts were made early in the season to secure vessels to contract for a direct freight from the Lakes to Liverpool, but the rates demanded were so high as to leave no alternative but to ship by way of New York.

The Crops in Canada West.

[From the Toronto Globe, 5th.]

We are happy to learn that in the townships north of this city the fall wheat has escaped the midge, having suffered but slight damage. Mr. McDougall, M.P.P., informs us that he has made a careful examination of several fields in his neighborhood (York Mills), and estimates the loss from the attacks of the midge at less than five per cent. The [illegible] are not nearly so [illegible] in these townships, will probably escape altogether, unless the period during which the fly deposits its eggs is much more extended than Mr. Fitch or any other observers have supposed. The fall wheat between the Ridges and Lake Ontario was so badly injured by spring frosts, that many fields were ploughed up and sown with spring wheat or other grain. The produce per acre will, therefore, fall much below an average, either on account of spring frosts or the midge.

The dangers yet to be encountered are rust and wet weather in harvest. Against these, and especially against the former, no precautions can protect the crop. The use of an early [illegible], however, which is almost universal, has reduced the risk of loss from wet weather to a minimum. The crop may now be allowed to stand until it is so ripe that it can be cut at to the last moment before gathering. It is not so necessary to expose the cut grain for six or eight days in the field, when the weather is favorable, as it was when the scythe and the sickle were the only implements available to the harvester.

The recent rains have greatly benefitted all spring crops in this neighborhood, except hay, which will be light. The root crops, especially turnips, and rape began, has failed in many places, owing to the dry weather that followed the sowing of the seed. The later kinds of turnips will be made to supply the deficiency. All kinds of fruit will yield abundantly, and upon the whole we think we may now congratulate the country upon the prospect of a harvest considerably above the average. Let prices maintain their present range for a few weeks longer, and the farmers of Canada will be able to pay their debts, the country merchants will then be able to pay theirs—the mechanic, the tradesman, the professional man will feel the animating impulse, and the whole country enter a more joyous aspect.

Trade is without activity. The show of preparation for the approaching season is also slight. A sort of cribbing trade in some goods is taking place, but all goods at the rate of [illegible] of the Southern trade. A few arrivals of fall styles of silks have taken place, but no assortment and no exhibition of any goods has taken place. [illegible]

The woolen trade, usually quite [illegible], has been quiet, with a [illegible] demand. [illegible] purchases of woolen goods for future delivery [illegible] Domestic woolens suffer as well as foreign. There is a very heavy stock of cloths and cassimeres, foreign and domestic, on the market, which depresses prices and makes purchasers chary in all their movements. [illegible] ... The manufacturers of heavy flannels are selling at the lowest prices [illegible] to the period of cry [illegible]. We regret to remark that the import of foreign woolens in June [illegible] is nevertheless abundantly supplied from previous receipts.

The Wool Trade.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The month of June being the time for the shearing of the wool, the new clip has been brought to the market [illegible] ... [illegible]

A sales of both fleece and pulled wools, during the past month, have been light, and would have been larger if the [illegible] ... [illegible]

The medium of foreign wools have declined the rate of California, and similar domestic wools, which have been more quiet, and prices maintained.

Low foreign wools, especially long wool for worsted, have been in great demand, and large sales from all hands the stock has been in better supply. Long Donskoi and Rio Grande have been all sold, and of Cordova there is a moderate stock. The sales of other kinds of common foreign wools or shorter staple have been considerable, and a good demand for them is continuing.

From Europe we have been advised that Mestizo and Buenos Ayres wools have been sold since the last auction sales in London at better prices, and Cape and Australian wools realized 1d per lb. advance.

The Breslau (Silesian) wool fair—the most important after the new clip in Germany—went off with spirit, and 10 to 15 thalers per cwt. advance on last year's city prices have been paid, being equal to about 13 to 15 per cent.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Steamship Fulton.

CAPE RACE, July 5.—The steamship Fulton, from Havre 26th, via Southampton 27th ult., arrived at this point at four o'clock this morning, bound to New York. She has 95 passengers and 600 tons freight.

The Parana, from St. John's to New York, passed here in company with the Fulton.

The King of Naples is said to have accepted the proposition made by his Council for a constitution on a liberal basis, an alliance with Piedmont, &c., on certain conditions.

The National Guard are to occupy the different positions in Palmero during Garibaldi's operations against Messina. The organization of troops and marines was progressing at Palmero.

The interview at Baden had brought about an understanding between Austria and Prussia regarding the re-organization of the military contingent and constructive of the German Confederation.

Napoleon will not recognize the annexation of Sicily, Tuscany and the Romagna to Piedmont.

Two hundred thousand pounds in Australian gold arrived in England on the 25th.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The derangement of the California mails is likely to involve the Government in some serious difficulties, which have not been considered. Our postal treaty with England obligates us to bring the South American mails, which come to Panama by the English steamers. It is known that Mr. Vanderbilt has issued peremptory orders not to carry that mail or those from California after June 30th; so that both the foreign and California mails must be on the Isthmus till some temporary or other arrangement can be made. In view of this exigency, it is proposed that several of the swiftest Government steamers shall be specially detailed for the service until the meeting of Congress. The Panama Railroad and the Pacific Steamship Company are ready to extend their co-operation in such a movement, and the suggestion will be made in the Cabinet to-morrow.

Messrs. Davidge and Headley, who represented the Pacific Railroad corporation, have both disclaimed any sympathy or concert with Mr. Vanderbilt's scheme.

Propositions have been informally made to carry the mails by the San Antonio and other routes, but the transportation is considered impracticable. Mr. Gwin has returned here, in the hope of effecting some accommodation. He had taken passage with his family in the steamer of Monday, but left it when the mail was refused. His influence with the Administration is necessarily impaired since the rupture with the President last week.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, received important intelligence this morning from Nebraska Territory. Agent Giles, under date of June 22nd, writes that 200 or more Cheyenne, Arapahoe and Sioux Indians had just attacked a Pawnee village in sight of the Agency, and killed several persons. Mr. Giles rode in among the attacking party, and with the assistance of a half breed interpreter, succeeded in inducing them to draw off. They declared their purpose to return and wipe out the Pawnee tribe.

An express was immediately sent to Colonel Charles May, commanding at Fort Kearney, for assistance, as under the treaty of September, 1857, the Government is bound to protect the Pawnees on their new Reservation. The hostile expedition was fitted out west of Fort Kearney for the express purpose of making war on the Pawnees.

It was not until Senor Almonte, accredited to the Courts of France and England, had extended his diplomatic mission to Spain, that her Catholic Majesty lately sent a Minister to the Government at the city of Mexico. This course on the part of Spain obtains additional significance from the fact that both France and England have, it will be recollected, recently dispatched new ministers to that Republic. These European Governments, it is reliably entertained, are now engaged in renewed efforts to effect a reconciliation of the contending parties in Mexico. Our own Government, as heretofore, declines to take part in the arrangement, which promises more success than when the Juarez Government was elated with the hope now deferred of consummating a treaty with this Government.

In quarters well informed regarding diplomatic affairs, no apprehension is entertained of hostile demonstrations by Spain against Mexico, as has been reported, the belief prevailing that her conduct will be in accordance with the conciliatory programme initiated by France and England concerning the contending factions. It is further represented that the policy of Spain is peace, and that while she avoids entangling alliances, she is consolidating her power in view of the past. She may be called upon to act should Europe at a future day be involved in a general war.

Execution of Harden.

BELVIDERE, N. J., July 6.—Harden's execution took place at 1:35 P. M. He made no speech as had been anticipated. He remained suspended 12 minutes, when the physicians pronounced him dead. The body was then lowered to the ground and placed in the coffin. Many were disappointed at the refusal of the Sheriff to grant admission tickets, and expressed dissatisfaction with him for not performing the execution in front of the Court House.

Harden appeared calm and mounted the steps with a firm and steady step. The clergymen, Rev. Mr Day and Rev. Mr. King, accompanied by several physicians, ascended the scaffold with the doomed man. As soon as they reached the top Harden knelt down and led in prayer. In a few minutes he arose and stepped upon the drop. No outward sign of emotion appeared. He bade a final adieu to those standing with him upon the scaffold. The Sheriff fastened the cap over his face. He then descended to the ground and with a hatchet cut the cord that fastened the drop. Harden fell with a heavy lunge. His neck was not broken, and his death struggle was violent. His limbs were repeatedly drawn up and then dropped suddenly. Several minutes passed before the body became apparently devoid of sensibility. The remains were then taken to his father's residence, in Blairstown, where the funeral will take place on Sunday next. Harden made a full confession to his brother yesterday afternoon. It will be published, but not in his own language.

Murderer Lynched.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, July 6.—A letter from Fairfield, Iowa, to the Hawkeye, states that John Kephcart the murderer of Mrs. Jane Willis and her two children, was lynched yesterday. About 250 men from the vicinity of Batavia, where the victims were found, organized on horseback and came into Fairfield at ten o'clock in the morning and rode to the Court House and Jail, where the murderer was confined, and surrounded it. The citizens rapidly assembled. The County Judge and several citizens addressed and urged them to let the law take its course. This was of no avail, they said they had come for Kephcart and would have him, they had erected his scaffold and dug his grave. They then took a scantling and battered down the doors to his cell and quietly carried him to the place where the crime was committed and there hung him.

Arrest of a Swindler.

UTICA, July 6.—Frederick Hoffman, the missing Secretary of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, was arrested to-day near Trenton Falls, Oneida County, by officer Masterton, of the Independent Corps of Railroad Detectives. Hoffman is arrested on a charge of forging two checks of $1,500 each. He is also concerned in an over-issue of stock of the Pacific Mail Company, to the amount certainly of nearly $150,000, and perhaps much more. Officers have been in pursuit of Hoffman since May 21st. The prisoner now in custody denies that he is the man sought, although he has been identified by parties here.

Tug Boat Explosion—Four or Five Persons Killed and Many Wounded.

DETROIT, Mich., July 6.—The tug boat A. S. Field exploded her boiler about half past eight o'clock this evening, tearing the vessel to fragments, and instantly killing, as is supposed, four or five persons and severely injuring three of her crew. Several persons on adjacent vessels and wharf were also badly injured.

Hot.

CHARLESTON, July 5.—The weather is intensely hot in South Carolina and Georgia. Crops materially injured.

More of Hershel V. Johnson's Record.

In the Pittsburg Journal of the 2d inst., we find the following:

"CAPITAL SHOULD OWN ITS LABOR."

Write it out and look at it, all you laboring and toiling thousands of this city and State.—The Democracy, (Heaven save the mark!) at Baltimore have nominated a ticket, on which Johnson, of Georgia, is candidate for Vice President. This man, on the 17th of September, 1856, made a speech in Philadelphia, in which he said:

"We believe capital should own labor; is there any doubt that there must be a laboring class everywhere? In all countries and under every form of social organization there must be a laboring class—a class of men who get their living by the sweat of their brow; and then there must be another class that controls and directs the capital of the country."

We ask our readers, thousands of whom are men whose hands have been hardened by toil, we ask you now, if you can, to vote for a ticket that carries on it the name of a man who can unblushingly, in the capital of this mighty labor State, stand up and say that the owners of our foundries, rolling mills, coal mines and farms should own the sinews and the souls of those who "earn their bread by the sweat of their brow."

And moreover, this vile calumniator of honester men than he dares to be, puts his argument boldly upon the ground that capital should own its labor because it is labor!

Our Colleges.

We are in the season of College Commencements. Fond mothers and proud fathers are marking the days with a white stone, for their sons are graduating. The boys themselves are realizing a triumph greater than they have ever known in their young experience. Now, for the first time, they are wearing manly laurels, and bearing away with them from college authentic evidence of scholarship and learning.

How many of the graduates of 1860 have learned any thing that will be of use to them hereafter?

Men are such creatures of routine that he would confess himself a green-horn who wondered at the blind obstinacy with which our collegiate institutions cling to old traditions and mouldy examples. Our boys go on, year after year, learning to translate Pindar and Terence, beating their brains to compose alcaics, muddling their poor intellects over metaphysics and prosody—all because boys did the same thing at Oxford and Cambridge in the days of George the Third, and before that. And, after all, perhaps, nothing is more natural. Even in business matters, experience is preferred to theory and reason; much more so in the matter of education, which is generally consigned to dark, shady recesses, carefully secluded from the light of civilization and the torch of progress. Of the heroes of the day some are college graduates; it is respectable to graduate at college. How, then, says Cotton Pork, Esq., can it be pretended that a college education is not the right thing?

Of course, if a boy is to be a lawyer, or a doctor, or an editor, or a merchant, or a broker, or an engineer, it will not avail him much to be able to write alcaics, to be familiar with the Descartes theory of the mind, or to have read Æschylus in the original. It would be of use to him to be familiar with geography and the modern languages, history, and the fixed sciences; it would be agreeable, and could not be hurtful for him, to be versed in the great writers of his own tongue. But as there is not time in the college course for a boy to learn all these things—prosody and German, Descartes and chemistry, Æschylus and the laws of trade—the collegiate law requires that the preference shall be given to those branches of study which young men in England one hundred years ago were taught to consider the elements of polite education.

If you say to Cotton Pork—and every honest college graduate will say so—that the farrago of monastic learning and classic trash which is pumped into boys' heads at college is absolutely worse than useless; that it is of no more benefit to them in real life than the Analecta Majora, and that it occupies a place in their minds which should be filled with sensible knowledge, that worthy citizen and parent will be shocked, and will consider you a monster, a socialist, and an infidel. For he remembers that while he—the son of a poor man—was obliged to be content with a common-school education, his contemporaries of gentler birth went to college, and domineered over him on the strength of it; whereupon he resolved that his sons should go to college, and domineer over their humble acquaintances in like manner. And so our colleges flourish, and turn out, year after year, some as pretty ignoramuses as even Oxford or Cambridge.

The cleverest man in England has defended the University of Cambridge on the ground that boys are taught to row a good oar there. 'Tis a merit which is shared by Yale and Harvard; give them the benefits of it. But, after all, is life nothing but a boat-race? and should the plastic years of youth be devoted to nothing but erudite nonsense and the art of pulling stroke-oar? When will our teachers of youth take a lesson from Germany and Switzerland, and teach their scholars that which may serve them in after-life, and that only? Who will vindicate outraged common sense by discarding metaphysics and prosody from our colleges? Where is the Professor with nerve enough to denounce Greek?—Harper's Weekly.

An Invention for Milking Cows.

Among the feats of ingenuity performed by our countrymen is the invention of a machine for milking cows, lately patented by L. O. Colvin, of Fallen county in this State. Whoever has read the account given some years since in the Knickerbocker, of the Penstatic Hen Persuader, will find the marvellous properties of that imaginary instrument almost equalled by the real one of which we speak.

Four sockets receive the four teats of the cow, and the operator, seated beside the cow, with the pail between his knees, works two small air pumps, one on each side, which drain the teats by a process like that of nature, drawing but the milk, and releasing the teats, alternately, by short intervals of suction. This method has the advantage of the common one in cleanliness, and a still greater advantage in expedition, for it milks three cows, at least, in the time which would be needed for one if milked by the hand.

A friend who has tried the instrument on his own cows assures us that the experiment was highly satisfactory. The animals did not seem to be incommoded by its operation, or to dislike it any more than the usual way.—N. Y. Evening Post.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—Yesterday was the opening day for visitors to the Great Eastern. According to previous notice, the fee charged for admission was $1, and, in accordance with what was set forth in the Tribune as to that charge, visitors were very few. The number on board was variously estimated at 900, 1,200 and 1,500. Although each paying visitor had to pass through a patent register which, at the hour of closing, gives the unmistakable number, that information was refused to our reporter. A large crowd of visitors is expected to-day. It appears that the largest number of visitors which were on board the ship in any one day in England was 7,500; at half a-crown, or 60 cents American currency, each.—N. Y. Tribune, 4th.

THE COST OF THE JAPANESE.—Philadelphia expended $8,000 only in the reception and entertainment of the Japanese. New York, however, has gone into the business in a wholesale style. The wine bill at the ball will reach $20,000; the cost of the bouquets was $1,100. It is estimated that $100,000 will hardly cover the expenses to the city.

It is stated in the Gazette de Cologne that, in order to give an impetus to the new loan, the Pope sent to the banker Alessander Torlonia, to urge him to come forward and aid his efforts, the banking firm of Torlonia & Co. holding back in a way that threw discredit on the attempt. The banker protested his inability to do anything, but urged the Pope to appeal to Cardinal Antonelli, as, to his own knowledge, having paid him the dividends, the latter owned Bank of England stock to the amount of two millions of dollars.

—John Rose, of New York, died a few months since, and left by his will, $800,000 to purchase a farm, upon which to place such destitute children in New York, as might be placed under the guardianship of the "Rose Benevolent Association." One of the conditions was that a like sum should be raised by others. At a meeting recently held in New York, the Trustees of the People's College, at Havana, reported that Charles Cook of that place, was ready to contribute the additional $800,000, provided the farm and institution should be located at that place.

—Queen Victoria has expressed great disinclination to expedite the marriage of the heir apparent to the British throne with a Princess of Prussia. The Royal mother considers the agitation of the question premature, and, looking at the extreme youth of her beloved son, has openly conveyed her wish in the proper quarter that the subject may be dropped, at least for the present.

—The Niagara Herald says the rumor prevails that Blondin seriously contemplates diving from the centre of his cable in a life-boat made for the special purpose, into the roaring floodtides and foam-wreathed rapids of the river below! He is to undertake this dangerous experiment, not only from a desire of demonstrating whether such a thing as navigating the rapids is possible, but from the mere love of unheard of adventure.

—A Statistical Congress, to be held under the auspices of the English Government, will meet in London on the 16th. Judge Longstreet and Mr. Lawrence have been chosen as delegates on the part of the United States Government, and Dr. Wynne, and Mr. Shepherd Homans as the representatives of the American Geographical and Statistical Society.

—A Canadian paper has an account of the trial of a school teacher for cruel and outrageous treatment of his pupils. It is said that he whipped a little boy on his bare feet till the blood ran, and when a young lady, between seventeen and eighteen years of age, expressed sympathy with the child, he attempted to force from her an unwilling confession that she was wrong, striking her twice with a hickory whip-stock, over the back of the hand—the scars of which still remain—and when she started to leave the school house, thrusting the end of the whip-stock against her breast, and forcing her down into her seat, but finally ignominiously expelling her from the school.

OAK ORCHARD Acid Springs! These Springs are situated in the valley of the Oak Orchard Creek, in the town of Alabama, Genesee county, N. Y., eight miles South of the village of Medina, on the Erie Canal, and fourteen miles from Batavia. ☞ The principal Acid Springs are three in number besides these there are six others. They are all located within a circuit of about fifty rods. The medicinal qualities of the waters are fully shown in the subjoined testimonials. They contain a very large amount of Sulphur, Sulphuric Acid, Sulphate of Lime, and Proto-Sulphate of Iron. The great medicinal virtues possessed by the waters depend very largely upon the presence, in such unusual quantities, of these curative substances. Hundreds of cases of disease, especially those resulting from the scrofulous diathesis, have been cured by their use. [illegible] ... N. W. BOSTWICK, Sole Agent, No. 574 Broadway, New York.

☞ Oak Orchard Acid Spring Water. This Water is gaining great celebrity, and the demand for it is increasing rapidly. Its beneficial character is attested by thousands, and it is pronounced by distinguished physicians to be superior to any other medicinal Spring Water now in use. The almost miraculous cures which it has performed lead us to believe that it is destined to become extensively used in the treatment of very many diseases which ordinary remedies fail to cure. Its curative properties are established beyond question, and we feel assured that it must, to a great extent, supersede many of the artificial compounds of the day. We recommend those of our readers who may be suffering from general debility, or from any of the diseases for which this Water is prescribed, to give it a trial. See advertisement in another column.
